5-10% Increases In Freight Rates Given Railroads

ICC Allows Raise of One-Tenth But Cuts It in Half.

(Partial Text on Page 7.)

By Franklyn Waltman.

Causing disappointment in railroad circles, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday handed down its long-awaited rate decision granting the carriers authority to make freight charge increases equivalent to approximately 5 per cent of the entire rate structure.

The I. C. C. rejected the plea of the railroads for a horizontal 15 per cent rate increase, with certain exemptions. Instead, it authorized a flat increase of 10 per cent, but with such important exceptions as greatly to whittle down the advantages of such an increase.

Revenue Not Estimated.

The I. C. C. denied the railroads, for example, authority to increase the rate on bituminous coal, lignite, coke and iron ore. It restricted the increase on anthracite coal to 10 cents a ton. It restricted the increased rates on agricultural products, animals and products thereof, lumber, shingles and lath, cottonseed oil and vegetable oils (other than linseed oil) to 5 per cent.

Maximum increases authorized, moreover, are to be inclusive of increases in the rate structure last year in order that the percentages now authorized "shall not be made cumulative thereon."

The commission majority did not undertake to estimate the amount of additional revenue which would accrue to the railroads from these increases. Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman, in a concurring opinion, though asserting that the additional revenue these increases would produce was problematical, asserted that "they should cover liberally the deficiency to be made good," which he estimated at $270,000,000.

Carriers Disappointed.

Actuaries of the Association of American Railways were unable last night to arrive at an estimate because of the complicated nature, they explained, of the commission's conclusions. They questioned the Eastman estimate, however, as too high. One railroad authority here estimated the rates would not produce more than between $150,000,000 and $160,000,000 additional on the basis of 1937 freight volume.

The reason for the general disappointment in railroad circles over

Red Testifies He Slew Gorky To Be a Hitler

Yagoda Confesses to Other Killings at Russian Treason Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 8.—Genrikh G. Yagoda, secret police chief who "wanted to become a Russian Hitler," faced the Moscow treason trial court tonight and pleaded "full guilt" in four medical murders, including that of Maxim Gorky, noted writer.

G. G. YAGODA.

He admitted ordering the death of his predecessor in office and trying unsuccessfully to poison Nikolai Yezhoff, present secret police chief. He also testified he had sent $100,000 to Leon Trotsky, exiled former Soviet leader.

The gray-faced, broken man had retracted partially his pretrial confession, but after a recess in which he was taken back to prison, he repudiated the retraction.

His retraction of his previous denial, like that of N. N. Krestinsky on the second day of the trial, puzzled foreign observers.

Yagoda, who was the most dreaded head the Soviet secret police has known, and who knows all its methods, kept silent on his reasons.

In his testimony at the morning session he admitted he had ordered the overdose deaths of Gorky and Valerian W. Kuibisheff, chief of the first five-year plan.

Then, however, he denied he had ordered the medical murders of Maxim Pechkoff, Gorky's son, and Vyacheslaff Menzhinsky, his own predecessor as secret police chief.

In the morning session Prosecutor Andrei Vishinsky met his denial of implication in two of the deaths by reading from his confession, and demanding:

"Did you say this at the preliminary investigation?"

"Yes, I did; but it was not true."

"Why did you say it if it was not true?"

"I don't know."

When Vishinsky repeated the question, Yagoda replied:

"Allow me, please, not to answer this question."

Town Tolls Bells At Vote to Clear Its Witch of 1656

Hampton, N. H., March 8 (AP).—The bells tolled in Town Hall today—Eunice Goody Cole had been exonerated after 282 years.

By unanimous vote of 300 townspeople, Eunice Cole was restored to her rightful place as a citizen of Hampton and plans were indorsed to honor her at Hampton's tercentenary celebration.

In 1656 Eunice Goody Cole was convicted of witchcraft by a Massachusetts bay colony judge and served 10 years in a Boston jail—as long as Hampton citizens paid her board.

Then she returned to Hampton to bear the hoots and sneers of a nagging citizenry until she died and was buried in a shallow roadside grave with a stake driven through her body and mounted with a horseshoe so the devil could not possess her.

Chautemps Stakes Fate On Finances

Communists, Socialists May Be Forced Into Acquiescence.

The European Crisis.

Chautemps Stakes All.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 8.—Premier Chautemps decided today he would stake the life of his government on an effort to seek financial powers deemed necessary in view of France's 15,000,000,000 franc ($487,500,000) extraordinary defense program.

He announced after a cabinet meeting that he would seek parliamentary approval of the plan Thursday, and said the government was prepared "to accept its full responsibility before Parliament."

New Loan About March 14.

Faced by immediate opposition, the premier conferred with Socialist and Communist leaders and offered to resign and let the objectors form a government. Both Socialists and Communists declined the offer.

Some deputies believed Chautemps' strategy was to put members of the two parties in a position where they would be forced to vote the requested powers after refusing to take a share in the cabinet.

The government's program, according to preliminary statements of ministers, would include reorganization of accounts to reduce current expenses and pave the way for a new national defense loan about March 14.

$50,000,000 a Month.

Finance Minister Paul Marchandeau told the cabinet that national defense expenditures for the first two months of 1938 totaled more than 3,150,000,000 francs ($102,374,000) and would necessitate raising 15,000,000,000 francs this year for extraordinary expenditures.

(The ordinary national defense budget for 1938 totaled 22,000,000,000 francs, $717,000,000.)

Deputies said Chautemps wants a free hand, but probably would not go to the lengths demanded by Leon Blum in the former premier's "full powers" bill which led to downfall of the first People's Front ministry last summer.

C. I. O. Man Trails In Seattle Voting

Seattle, March 8 (U.P.).—Arthur B. Langlie, city councilman and "impartial" toward labor, took an early lead over Lieut. Gov. Victor A. Meyers tonight in first returns from Seattle's hotly contested nonpartisan mayoralty election.

Returns from the 90 of the city's 506 precincts gave: Langlie, 13,740, Meyers, 8,778.

Meyers had the support of the Committee for Industrial Organization and of several American Federation of Labor unions. He promised "more of the New Deal."

Commission Seeks 200 Cadets For Merchant Fleet School

A cadet-training program designed to improve personnel efficiency in the merchant marine and "encourage American youths to make a career of the sea" was announced yesterday by Emory S. Land, new chairman of the Maritime Commission.

The new plan will give Uncle Sam a closer relationship with the men who man Government-owned and subsidized vessels and is in line with recommendations made by Joseph P. Kennedy to clear up what he termed "deplorable labor conditions" in the strike-torn industry.

Two classes of trainees will be placed aboard the vessels—cadet officers selected from graduates of State nautical schools, the United States Naval Academy and the United States Coast Guard Academy, and cadets recruited from the country at large.

Applications will be received March 15. It is estimated that 200 boys, between 18 and 23, will be selected for the first training period.

Chairman Land's announcement was made on the day Harry Bridges, fiery leader of the West Coast longshoremen, appeared on Capitol Hill at a hearing held by the House Merchant Marine Committee—but did not testify.

Bridges has sought to answer "dangerous alien" charges against him before the Senate Commerce Committee, but will not be heard until "the Labor Department has decided on his case," Chairman Copeland has stated.

1 to 10% Income Tax In D. C. Revenue Bill

House Sub-Committee Votes 4 to 6 Pct. Corporation Levy; Doubles Whisky Impost and Approves Tax on Beer.

By James D. Secrest.

A graduated income tax of from 1 to 10 per cent on individuals and 4 to 6 per cent on corporations was adopted yesterday by the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs as it continued its redrafting of the District revenue bill.

At the same time the sub-committee voted to double the present levy of 50 cents a gallon on whisky and impose a tax on beer of $1 a barrel, thus adding $1,500,000 in potential revenue.

While admitting that he could only hazard a guess, Chairmrn Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, estimated that the revised income tax plan will produce a gross return of $5,000,000, but a net revenue of $2,000,000.

He explained that provision would be made for the crediting of intangible personal property taxes paid. District officials said that levy last year returned $2,800,000 and this year they expect $3,000,000.

The sub-committee deferred action on whether or not members of Congress will be exempt from the tax and as to when it becomes operative.

As predicted, the sub-committee wrote into the revenue bill a provision repealing the inoperative 60-40 act under which Congress is obliged to pay 40 per cent of the cost of maintaining the District government. The law has not been followed for 15 years.

Under the flat 1 per cent tax written into the original District revenue measure, the income tax was made retroactive to apply to income earned in 1937. It also was made payable on March 15, this year.

Since drafting the first bill, however, the sub-committee has deliberated over the suggestion that an income tax on 1937 income might

Criminal Justice Body Praised by D. C. Bar Leader

The Washington Criminal Justice Association was praised "as a power" in fighting crime in Washington by Bolitha J. Laws, president of the District Bar Association, at its monthly meeting last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Value of the Criminal Justice Association, he said, is due to "its effective work and also because of the interest of leading newspaper publishers in the District of Columbia." He suggested that this association and the Bar Association work together in the future.

"I am convinced," Laws said, "that if an epidemic of disease swept over our city, leading physicians would immediately give their services to relieve the conditions. I also feel that where a grievous situation brought about by lawbreaking is involved in this jurisdiction, our leading lawyers will lend their assistance . . . Cooperation is more than good will. It requires definite energetic steps to be taken along constructive lines. With a view to working out a program, conferences have been held with various parties in interest."

House Votes High Salary Publication

Conciliatory Gesture to Roosevelt Affects Incomes of $75,000.

Effort Fails to Alter Profits and Capital Gains Taxes.

By Robert C. Albright.

Treasury publication of all corporation salaries of $75,000 and more was approved by the House yesterday in a gesture of conciliation to the President, who wants full salary publicity.

An amendment to the tax bill providing high bracket pay publicity was adopted by a voice vote after failure of two prior efforts to force continued publication by the House of salaries as low as $15,000.

It was the lone noncommittee amendment adopted in a day of fruitless efforts by independents to alter undivided profits tax and capital gains provisions of the pending bill. Routine approval was given committee recommendations for modification and more gradual stepdown of capital gains tax rate.

Approval of the "$75,000 and over" publicity proviso followed capitulation of Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, in his rift with the President over publicity provisions of the present law.

The law now requires publication by the committee of corporate salaries of $15,000 and over. On motion of Doughton, the House voted 230 to 114 last year to repeal the requirement, but the Senate pigeonholed the bill. The committee's new tax bill dropped the publicity provision entirely.

Last week at a press conference, the President said publicity should be provided as a matter of public morals. Chairman Doughton stood his ground. He pointed to wide distribution of "sucker lists" compiled from the salary tables. Yesterday he repeated that the annual rush to scrutinize salary lists had disrupted the work of his office and was a "nuisance and annoyance to him." He asked to be relieved of it.

"Publicity has had its chance," said Doughton, "and it hasn't stopped these large salaries."

Majority lines held firmly behind Doughton against an amendment by Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, to continue the $15,000 publicity provision of the present law. It was rejected by a 118 to 60 teller vote.

Later, Representative W. D. McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, tried again with an amendment to force publication of salaries over $20,000. This was rejected, 104 to 71.

Meanwhile, Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New

Workshop, Beauty Parlors Help Reclaim Mentally Ill

By Gerald G. Gross

The first anniversary of the death of Dr. William White, beloved pioneer in modern psychiatry, ocurred two days ago.

Every patient admitted to St. Elizabeths Hospital received a little booklet from the man who was its superintendent from 1904 until his death. It described the institution and its many types of service, explained that the patient might write and receive mail, smoke and have visitors, told about religious worship on Sunday afternoons and gave other information.

Under the subheading "General Remarks," the guide written by Dr. White concluded:

"There is no subject upon which the general public and a great majority of patients who are admitted here are more misinformed than on the subject of mental illness and so-called 'insanity.' In order to correct any erroneous impression which a newly admitted patient may have, the following points are stressed:

"Insanity is not a disease, but is only a legal term indicating that

White House Summons Climaxes Day of Rapid Developments.

Auditors Question $15,542,459 Outlay

Norris Flays Chairman Morgan in Senate Debate on Row.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt, in an effort to reach a swift showdown in the bitter little war which has split apart the Tennessee Valley Authority, yesterday summoned the three TVA directors to appear before him Friday morning to state their cases.

His order climaxed a day of dizzying developments, chief of which was the revelation that the General Accounting Office has held that the TVA irregularly spent $15,542,439.70 in the fiscal years 1936 and 1937, and that $10,727,509.70 of that amount still is "unexplained" by the TVA.

Disclosure had already been made of the fact that legality of almost $5,000,000 of TVA expenditures from 1933 to 1936 was questioned by the Comptroller General's office. The total alleged, after disallowing for explained details, was $4,748,035 for the three years.

7,964 Items Questioned.

Final details of the exact amount irregularly expended remain to be ascertained in the special report now being compiled by the General Accounting Office. But examination yesterday of the 1937 fiscal year report of Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott, made recently to Congress, showed this statement:

"During the fiscal years 1936 and 1937 exceptions were made and the authority regularly notified on a total of 7,964 transactions involving $15,542,459.70. Of such number and amount there was released, after proper explanation or recovery, a total of 3,077 exceptions amounting to $4,814,950, leaving 4,887 still pending in the amount of $10,727,509.70."

The total of exceptions unsatisfactorily explained to the Comptroller General's office for the fiscal year 1934 was set at $2,103,326. Figures for 1935 are unavailable, but the addition of the 1934 final figure to the 193 and 1937 total of $10,727,509.70, disregarding whatever similarly unexplained amount exists for the year 1935, is $12,740,835.70.

This, some experts believe, is by far the largest total of unexplained or disallowed expenditures of any Government agency.

A special field audit, necessitated by the TVA situation, has thus far cost $44,000, exclusive of the cost of the regular Washington audit, the report stated.

The President, at his press conference, announced he would ask the three TVA directors for facts, not opinions, and that he will demand that all statements heretofore made be justified, if they can be justified, he added.

Won't Prejudge.

When asked whether he would seek the resignation of Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, the President indicated he was not pre-judging the case. When asked if he knew whether under the TVA act he had authority to compel Morgan's resignation, he said he was not interested in that phase of the problem, that at this stage all he wanted was facts.

But the President revealed that last fall he had chided Chairman Morgan for an article in the September Atlantic Monthly, which the other two directors, David E. Lilienthal and Dr. Harcourt Morgan, declared had impugned their integrity.

The two directors insisted that Chariman Morgan make good on his statements or withdraw them, the President said, and disclosed that he had written the chairman a letter expressing his own concern in the matter, and telling the chairman he had a definite obligation to

Whitney Firm Fails; Stocks Remain Calm

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 8—The brokerage house of Richard Whitney & Co.—whose senior partner ruled over the New York Stock Exchange in the crucial days following the 1929 market collapse—failed today.

Federal and State agencies immediately plunged into widespread investigations of the firm's activities.

At the offices of the stock exchange, it was said the routine March 1 auditing of the Whitney firm's accounts disclosed questionable activities which were reported at once to the business conduct committee of the exchange. The exchange, it was said, at once notified the SEC and the New York State attorney general's office. Over the week-end the business conduct committee determined its course and filed charges against the firm with the governing committee yesterday afternoon.

Although the failure was regarded in Wall street as one of the most spectacular in exchange history, because of Whitney's prominence, it left the stock market calm.

Prices of leading issues generally opened lower, slipped moderately after the news of the Whitney failure was announced from the rostrum of the exchange a few minutes after the opening and strengthened in late trading.

While investigators of the Securities and Exchange Commission worked behind the locked doors of the brokerage house, Assistant Attorney General Ambrose V. McCall,

Wheeler Lashes Reorganization As a Surrender

Pleads With Senate Not to Give Up Its Rights to President.

Senator Burton Kendall Wheeler, liberal Montana Democrat who led successful coalition forces against the President's court bill last year, yesterday turned his battering oratory against Presidential power to abolish bureaus and functions.

Lining up with Senator Harry Flood Byrd Democrat), of Virginia, against power for the President to reorganize the Government without specific approval of each change by Congress, Wheeler pleaded with the Senate not to relinquish its parliamentary powers.

"You will be ridiculed by the people from the housetops," said the Montanan. "How do you think you are going to maintain parliamentary government if your leaders stand up here and say you are incompetent and inefficient."

Charges "Arrogance."

Reported efforts to reconcile Wheeler with the President apparently were shattered as the Senator lashed out at the President's reorganization formula, charged New Deal bureau heads with "arrogance" and declared the Administration is "playing politics" with WPA.

"The way the Administration has played politics with WPA in my State has been a scandal," he asserted.

Rising in defense of the reorganization measure, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, clashed repeatedly with Wheeler.

Byrnes Sees Economy.

To Wheeler's charge that the bill would neither reduce Government spending nor bring greater efficiency, Byrnes insisted the "object set forth in the resolution is to promote the greatest possible economy with efficiency in Government."

The Montana Senator declared "democratic inefficiency" is preferable to a "totalitarian state." He declared 70,000,000 Germans placed themselves under a dictatorship in exchange for promises of security and efficiency.

When Barkley asked whether the Senate should admit it could do nothing to reorganize the Government and eliminate inefficient overlappings, Wheeler shot back:

"Well, you are the Democratic leader in the Senate."

"What's that got to do with it?" asked Barkley.

Glass Joins In.

The Western liberal said he thought Congress "ought to close up and go home," if it passed the reorganization bill in its present form.

At one point, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, asked if Wheeler thought "we ought to give the President power to abolish Congress."

"No," Wheeler said, "I guess not."

The reorganization bill critic sometimes strayed far from the subject matter of the bill and once suggested that the next administration "may not be a Democratic one."

"You may get another Republican administration," he said. "It is not probable, but it is possible."

Says Bureaus Retaliate.

Citing instances of bureau officials retaliating against members of Congress opposed to Administration measures, he said a relief worker on a Montana WPA project "was called on the carpet and threatened with being fired because he was a friend of mine."

He quoted Senators as saying: "We go down to the departments, and they do not pay any attention to us."

"Why should they?" mocked Wheeler, "Why should they pay any attention to a member of the United States Senate?"

He urged the Senate to adopt his amendment, which would require both Houses of Congress to approve every reorganization order issued by the President. Under the Byrnes bill, any reorganization order would become law after 60 days unless it were disapproved by both Houses.

Warns of Professors.

Wheeler told the Senate the President under this authorization could abolish "99½ per cent" of any executive department and wipe out bureaus and functions entirely. He said it would be a "physical impossibility" for the President personally to reorganize the Government; that he would turn the work over to "subordinates."

"Some professor from Dartmouth, or Yale, or Harvard, or Columbia, is going to do it up in one of those bureaus," said the Senator. "They are going to be the boys who figure it out and they are going to send it down, and they are going to say to my people out in Montana, 'We are going to abolish the Bureau of Indian Affairs,' or 'We are going to abolish the Reclamation Bureau.'"

Alternately facing the Senators seated about him, he told them they might later call on officials "with your hats in your hands" only to be told that "Congress has given up its power."

Turning to Senators known to be friendly to such agencies as the Forest Service, the Reclamation Bureau, the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Veterans' Administration, he warned them the President could abolish these agencies or transfer functions to other departments.

"If we do not abolish some of them," Senator Byrnes put in, "I do not know how we are going to effect any economies."

Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, pointed out "there are many things Congress cannot do in executive forms."

"That's why we set up the ICC, because we couldn't write railroad rates here," said Minton. "Those agencies do the same things we cannot do here—under certain standards."

Arguments Called Old.

"Under certain standards?" said Wheeler. "Under what standards?"

"Well, you've been reading the bill," said Minton. "You ought to know."

Barkley said Wheeler's arguments "were made years ago" against setting up such agencies as the ICC and the Federal Trade Commission.

"No, they weren't the same arguments," said Wheeler. "We didn't say then that a President could abolish the Veterans' Administration.

W. S. FARREN.

Farren Sees Rapid Growth in Highlands Community If Those Two 'Wants' Are Satisfied; School, Sewers Also Desired.

By Christine Sadler.

Wants of the North Randle Highlands Community Association are many, but the members would be happy if only a small percentage of their dreams could be made come true.

"It takes us a long time to get anything accomplished over here, but we're going to keep on talking. That's one thing you can do in the District of Columbia just as freely as you can anywhere else," said W. S. Farren, the association's president.

A new Pennsylvania Avenue bridge, paving for Minnesota avenue, local suffrage, a school building, and sewers on M street are on the "want" list of the group.

If a choice had to be made, the bridge probably would come out first.

"Give us both the bridge and the paving, and this section would grow so fast it would be hard to recognize in a little while," Farren declared.

The association would like to have complete suffrage for the District "just the same as they have in the States," but would be willing to play ball with the other citizens in working out any suffrage setup most acceptable to everybody. Until some sort of suffrage is realized it does not see any too much happiness in store for the permanent Washingtonians.

Farren's group was organized three years ago and has approximately 65 members out of an estimated 200 citizens who are eligible to join. Farren is serving his second term as president, and was one of the founders.

Meetings are held in the portable school which houses pupils through the lower third grade and which is the only school in the community.

"If we could get a grammar school building which would take care of the children until they are ready for high school we would be satisfied. As it is now, they are shifted first to Benning School and then back to the Randle Highlands School. Both of them are overcrowded and there is really no room for our children anywhere," a member of the North Randle Highlands group said.

Farren is a native of Oklahoma, but has lived in Washington since 1920. He's an automobile mechanic, however, and not a Government worker. "I never have worked for the Government," he explains, "except when I was in the U. S. Army during the war."

He represents his group in the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations and is an active member of the mechanics' union.

On Friday Capt. G. L. Shorey, president of the Piney Branch Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

6-Year Building Program Adds $200,000,000 to Annual Budget.

By the United Press.

Enactment of President Roosevelt's super-Navy program will increase the annual Navy Department appropriation to approximately $750,000,000, or $200,000,000 more than the record-breaking 1939 appropriation, high naval officials revealed last night.

The increased Navy budget will become effective next year when Congress appropriates for the fiscal year 1940 and may possibly exceed $750,000,000, depending upon speed with which the huge building program is pushed. The 1939 appropriation, as approved by the House, called for expenditure of $553,000,000.

Speed-up Foreseen.

Present plans call for completion of the program in six years at a total estimated cost of $1,113,000,000. On that basis the Navy Department annual appropriation would have to be increased $185,500,000 over the 1939 appropriation. This would result in annual expenditure of $738,000,000 to give the United States a "navy second to none."

Navy officials also see the possibility that the threatening world situation might force the United States to complete the program in five years, if possible. In that case the annual increase would rise to $222,600,000, bringing total annual expenditure for maintenance and construction of the super fleet to $775,600,000.

In addition to this the cost of maintaining the big fleet after it had been built would range from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 a year more than at present.

New Canal Urged.

The cost estimate was presented shortly after Chairman Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, warned that naval expansion is vital to protection of the Panama Canal, which he described as the keystone of American defense.

He also recommended construction of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal, at an estimated cost of $400,000,000, to supplement the inadequate war-time facilities of the Panama Canal.

Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, author of the war referendum resolution which was narrowly defeated in the House after vigorous Administration protests, introduced a resolution proposing a naval building holiday until 1940 and a limitation conference in Washington next fall.

The Gallup Poll

Whipping Posts For Criminals Opposed As Baltimore Incident Makes Headlines.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 8.—The flogging with a cat-o'-nine-tails administered last week to a Baltimore printer convicted of beating his wife has reawakened public interest in the whipping post as a means of punishing criminals.

George Gallup

This ancient practice, although legal in two States, Delaware and Maryland, and still widely used in England, is condemned by a majority of the Nation's voters reached in an American Institute of Public Opinion survey. Voters object to whipping with the "cat" on the ground that it is brutal and ineffective in stopping crime, although a substantial minority think it is excellent punishment for certain types of offenders.

The survey, which reached a scientifically selected cross-section of voters in every State, asked two questions. The first was: "Would you be in favor of restoring the whipping post as a means of punishing certain types of criminals?"

The vote is:

Yes	39%
No	61

The second question asked: "If yes, what type of criminals?"

Sex offenders were mentioned by the largest number of voters, with wife beaters and habitual drunkards listed next. Thieves, petty criminals, juvenile offenders and "repeaters" who fail to be cured of crime by ordinary prison sentences were also named.

Women voters were found to be substantially more opposed to whipping posts than men. Whereas 57 per cent of males reached in the survey disapproved the practice, women voters were 66 per cent against it.

Despite public opposition, there have been several recent manifestations of sentiment for flogging as a punishment. In Seattle in November, 1936, the State Bar Association's legislative committee publicly recommended the whipping post for males over 21 convicted of two felonies, and for any crime of force and violence or with a deadly weapon.

In Powhatan, Ohio, youthful offenders are whipped over a barrel in the public square. According to a recent statement by the local judge there has been a 60 per cent reduction in juvenile delinquency in Powhatan since the public spankings started five years ago.

Lashings were also revived in one judicial circuit of Virginia last October when Judge Benjamin Haden allowed the plaintiff to whip a convicted offender. Several leading Virginia newspapers approved the sentence.

Many penologists point out, however, that punishments by disgrace depend for their effect on the compactness of the village or community. They claim that the development of big cities has destroyed the intimate community bonds which were the basis of medieval punishments by means of the whipping post, the stock, the pillory and other forms of disgrace. The famous British naval practice of "flogging through the fleet," by which an offender went from ship to ship receiving lashes for his crime, was abolished many years ago. English law still permits flogging of thieves and white-slavers, however.

"Crooks Fear Thrashing."

While most voters in the survey object to flogging on the ground that it is medieval and inhuman, the minority claim that it is no more cruel than the monotony of prison life, and may be more effective as a crime deterrent. "A good thrashing," said one typical voter, "is the thing all crooks fear."

Slow Tax Payers Denied City's Fire, Garbage Facilities

Fort Myers, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Garbage removal was discontinued and fire protection withdrawn today from 48 tax delinquent homes and business buildings.

Occupants were notified that unless they removed garbage at their own expense they would be hauled into municipal court.

Since the "crackdown" started last week, two large property owners have paid a total of $20,000 in back taxes.

Fire Chief Anderson notified the blacklisted delinquents that the department would not provide fire protection. Equipment, he said, would answer alarms but would be used to prevent the spread of fire to adjoining buildings on which taxes have been paid.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over!

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Czech Trade Pact To Raise Jobless, Republicans Say

By the Associated Press.

Republican Congressmen from the Nation's shoe producing sections charged yesterday that the reciprocal trade agreement with Czechoslovakia would leading to "closing down of shoe factories and increased unemployment, especially in New England."

On the other hand, Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, who had requested postponement of negotiations until the Tariff Commission completed an investigation of comparative costs in Czechoslovakia and the United States, termed the agreement "more satisfactory than expected."

Senator Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, told the Senate the agreement would "increase our trade involvement with a nation lying in the heart of the European war zone, and "that with almost unbelievable indifference to the welfare of American workers, this agreement promises not to raise duties."

Dodd, Jr., to Run As a New Dealer

By the Associated Press.

William E. Dodd, jr., son of the former American Ambassador to Germany, said yesterday he planned an active campaign for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Eighth Virginia District on "a 100 per cent New Deal platform."

He will oppose Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, who has served since March 4, 1931. Dodd's home is in Round Hill.

Dodd said he would open his campaign with a speech at Purcellville late this month.

Conference Called On Anti-Lynch Bill

The National Negro Congress yesterday announced a national conference of leaders here March 19 to promote passage of the anti-lynching bill this session of Congress.

More than 200 are expected to attend the meeting which will be held at the Whitelaw Hotel, Thirteenth and T streets northwest, said John P. Davies, secretary of the congress.

"The anti-lynching bill is not dead, said Davies. "It can be passed in this session of Congress. Our job is to rally millions of honest Negro and white citizens to demand that Congress not adjourn until the bill is passed. The National Negro Congress is calling this conference to do its share to aid Walter White and other N. A. A. C. P. officials in their splendid efforts to secure passage of the bill. As well, we feel it our duty to utilize this conference to answer the vicious slanders of the Senate filibusterers against the Negro people."

Police to Talk In Schools on Traffic Safety

Sergeant, Private Assigned to Four Classes; Radio Drive to Continue.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A new safety program in Washington schools will be started next week when a police sergeant and a private are assigned to visit classrooms to warn students against traffic hazards.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of a special House sub-committee on traffic, suggested the idea to Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor.

Current efforts to make Washington "safety conscious," said Schulte, have resulted in a marked decrease in traffic accidents and a sharp boost in traffic arrests.

Crashes Cut in Half.

Schulte has reported to the House District Committee that deaths dropped from 32 in the first three months of 1937 to 18 for the same period this year. Accidents and injuries, the legislator pointed out, dropped in the same ratio.

At the same time, arrests for traffic violations, the report stated, increased from 6,763 in February, 1937, to 9,022 last month.

In the month since radio broadcasts from Traffic Court were insugurated, Schulte said, accidents in Washington have been "cut in half."

Broadcasts to Continue.

Following a conference with the four Police Court judges, police officials and representatives of radio stations yesterday, Schulte announced that courtroom broadcasts will be continued.

Station WOL will carry the daily programs, WMAL will join in on Mondays and Thursdays and WJSV will begin a series of Sunday night recorder court broadcasts at 8:30 p. m. Sunday.

As District authorities prepared plans for a trial installation of parking meters on several downtown streets, the American Automobile Association called for a Congressional investigation of the meter system before its adoption here.

Schulte said he would fight efforts to pass parking meter legislation in the House.

Forger Who Used Dead Man's Name Gets Year in Jail

For a while there it looked like ghost-writing, but in Police Court yesterday it was revealed as a simple case of forgery.

Benjamin T. Johnson, 911 M street northwest, pleaded guilty to bad check charges which involved nine worthless checks. The signature he used was that of W. R. Payne, who died a year ago.

Johnson explained to Judge Edward M. Curran that he became a patient at Gallinger Hospital early last year while serving time for another bad check charge. Payne, who occupied the adjoining cot, died last March and Johnson appropriated his driver's permit.

After finishing his term, he started using Payne's name, backing it up with the permit, he said. Judge Curran sentenced him to serve a year on each of the nine offenses, concurrently.

Suspect Accused Of Slashing Cable Is Held to Jury

Buster Hodo, 28, colored, who narrowly escaped electrocution on the Pennsylvania bridge over the Potomac last week, appeared in Police Court yesterday on charges of destroying property.

According to police, Hodo cut the copper cable which controls the draw and signal system on the bridge. About 800 pounds of copper, valued at 30 cents a pound, has been stolen since February 15, it was reported. The cable runs near a high-tension line which would have killed Hodo had he touched it. Judge Edward M. Curran held him for the grand jury.

Los Angeles, March 8 (AP).—A woman identified by detectives as the Baroness Irene Pongracz, wife of a former Hollywood actor, was treated at a receiving hospital today after taking poison. Hospital attendants said she would recover.

Police said the woman formerly was married to Cyril Tolley, British golfer, and also to J. W. Palmer, of Chicago. The Baron Pongracz played in silent films.

Woman Clerk In War Office Held as Forger

Mrs. Claire Fraser Jailed; Admits Cashing Checks for $2,000.

Mrs. Claire E. Fraser, 42, clerk in charge of the contract office, finance section, War Department, was seized by Federal agents yesterday and charged with forging $2,000 in Government obligations.

Arrested at the desk she has occupied nearly ten years, Mrs. Fraser was taken before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and held for the grand jury.

She admitted forging Federal checks which should have been used to pay contracts let by the War Department. Commissioner Turnage set her bond at $5,000.

Frank J. Wilson, chief of the Secret Service, arrested the woman after evidence had been gathered for several weeks by Treasury agents. The checks, he said, had been forged over a period extending from 1934 to last month.

Mrs. Fraser was in charge of the department which prepared vouchers for payment of contracts. The vouchers were made out to individuals instead of the companies to which payment was to be made.

When the checks were drawn, it is charged, the names of fictitious individuals were placed on them. The charge against the woman is that she forged the checks and cashed them.

Mrs. Fraser, who lives at the Continental Hotel, made bond last night and was released to appear in court when called.

Performing Dog Shot at Fort Myer Likely to Recover

Chances for "Boogie's" recovery were very good last night, according to his master, Sergt. Frank W. Smith, retired.

A bullet, still unexplained, passed through Boogie's hip Sunday night when the performing dog left his master's home for a romp through the Fort Myer grounds.

For many years the dog performed at the military reservation, and delighted many fashionable visitors at the horse shows. Smith retired five years ago. So did Boogie. But he was still active.

The dog lives with his master at 1729 Twelfth street, Arlington, Va.

State Worker Convicted Of Road Supply Thefts

Rocky Mount, Va., March 8 (AP).—Reporting after nearly three hours' deliberation, a Franklin County Circuit Court jury today found Ray S. Carter, 32-year old former resident engineer for the State highway department, guilty of stealing road supplies and recommended punishment of 5 years in the penitentiary.

Fire Races Mile, Burns $15,000 Potomac Home

Volunteer Departments Battle Blaze Without Water Supply.

A wind-swept fire which raced through a mile of grassland and jumped a 20-foot road yesterday, destroyed the home of John B. Duley two miles north of Potomac, Md.

Volunteer fire departments from Rockville, Cabin John and Sandy Spring responded, but without water were helpless to halt the flames, which leaped 20 feet high and left only the foundation of Duley's home and five outbuildings.

Damage was estimated at $15,000.

The fire started a mile away in a trash blaze. Duley, his wife, and brother, Albert, A., saw the grass ire. Wind whipped it out of their control.

After the fire departments had departed the blaze broke out again in a nearby cornfield.

At Barnesville, Md., 20 miles from Rockville on the old Frederick road, a four-room log house was razed when its roof was ignited by sparks from the chimney.

Robert Smith, colored, his wife and six children escaped before the rapidly burning roof collapsed.

Under a high wind the blaze spread to a nearby woods, but was brought under control by the Rockville volunteer fire department.

Striking Students At Farm School To Fight Eviction

Doylestown, Pa., March 8 (AP).—Striking students received notice they were expelled today from the National Farm School, and replied they would stay on the campus "until forcibly evicted."

All but 10 of the 175 boys who came from 22 States to study scientific agriculture participated in the strike against the retention of Dean Cletus L. Goodling as farm manager.

Meanwhile 28 of the 30 faculty members donned overalls and assisted hired farmers in milking cows and doing other chores abandoned by the students.

350 Names Added To D. C. WPA Roll

The names of 350 persons were added to the District WPA roles yesterday, bringing the total here to 7,593.

Otto Cass, deputy administrator, in making the announcement said that the local agency would employ about 1,400 additional persons under the recently increased quota.

A total of 3,500 who applied for work relief are being investigated by case workers, and it is likely that the new jobs will be filled from among this group.

Two hundred women were put to work immediately on a sewing room project. The group worked from 3 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. due to the lack of space in the building for daytime work.

Cass said that 60 additional women will be put to work today in the Household Service Demonstration Center, where training is offered to housekeepers.

Police Sergeant Mansfield Retired

Detective Sergt. Charles E. Mansfield, member of the Metropolitan Police force for the past 30 years, was ordered retired yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The order, which becomes effective March 21, resulted from physical disabilities of Mansfield, who is 54 and was in charge of the narcotics squad. He will be paid $125 a month.

The retiring detective has been commended several times for meritorious service.

D. C. Man Exonerated In Manslaughter Case

An indictment charging Albert C. Johnson, 34, with manslaughter in connection with the death of Leslie C. Thomas, 42, in October, 1936, was dismissed in District Court yesterday when a jury, deliberating but few minutes, brought in a not guilty verdict.

Thomas, a bricklayer, was fatally injured in a rooming house near Sixth and G streets northwest. In a scuffle, he is said to have fallen and struck his head, later dying of a fractured skull.

3 Powers Near Showdown on Peace or Arms

Anglo-Italian Talks Open at Rome; Nazi Envoy Due in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 8—Europe's rival powers fenced for advantage tonight in delicate negotiations which may determine whether arbitration or armaments will settle their problems.

Anglo-Italian negotiations entered preliminary stages with the Earl of Perth, Great Britain's ambassador to Rome, visiting Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano at Chigi Palace. Lord Perth returned to Rome Sunday from London with instructions for a "realistic" approach to Anglo-Italian problems.

Thursday the British will begin even more ticklish discussions in London with Germany. It was believed success of the London talks hinged on Chancellor Hitler's demands for colonies.

Mob Protests Ribbentrop.

Demonstrators crying "down with Ribbentrop" plunged Piccadilly Circus into confusion tonight, snarling traffic and bringing out 50 reserve police to cope with the crowds.

The demonstrators were protesting against Joachim von Ribbentrop, retiring Nazi ambassador, who is due in London tomorrow to discuss Hitler's demands with Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Press Backs Government.

Chamberlain, whose decision to deal directly with Hitler and Mussolini caused Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to resign, has given no intimation as to what concessions he is prepared to make.

The British press tacitly supported government policy by refraining from speculation about the conferences. Hitler in his recent Reichstag speech sharply criticized British newspapers for their handling of reports on German affairs.

The House of Commons was given further information as to the tremendous scope of British armament plans.

Home Office Undersecretary Geoffrey Lloyd announced consultations were under way with public utilities, including electricity, gas and railway companies, on the best way to insure effective operation in wartime. Similar conferences will begin shortly with dock, harbor and water supply authorities.

Peer Deserts Labor.

Conservatives in Parliament were encouraged by the desertion of Lord Sanderson, blind peer, from the Labor Party. He announced he was following Lord Arnold, who quit the labor party ten days ago, because the party's foreign policy "involves too much hatred of other powers . . ." and "is a menace to the peace of the world."

The Italian press had little to say about the Anglo-Italian conference, in strange contrast to the columns devoted to the current visit of the Polish foreign minister, Col. Joseph Beck.

The British secretary of foreign affairs, Viscount Halifax, said in the House of Lords that the government does not "in the present circumstances contemplate taking any initative at Geneva in connection with events in Austria."

Trawlers Fill Gap In Franco's Fleet

Hendaye, France (On the Spanish Frontier), March 8 (AP).—Loss of the 10,000-ton cruiser Baleares caused the Spanish insurgent government today to reinforce its blockading fleet with armed trawlers and other converted auxiliary vessels.

The insurgent government also issued a decree authorizing requisition of all ships registered from Spanish ports for national defense. The decree said indemnities would be paid.

Dispatches indicated the insurgent fleet, based at Palma, island of Mallorca, was avoiding any new encounters at sea.

Greek Envoy Kills Self.

Moscow, March 8 (AP).—It was announced officially tonight that D. Nikola Poulos, Greek charge d'affaires here, had committed suicide. The diplomat left a note saying he was taking his life because he was suffering from an incurable ailment.

Eden's Famed Hat Missing on Vacation

London, March 8 (AP).—The famous black, curled-brim Eden hat disappeared today from the brow of the man who made it famous and fashionable, former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Eden left for a vacation in "southern France" wearing a dark brown felt with its snap-brim pulled down all the way around.

liminary investigation, he said he would not.

When Yagoda was secret police chief, his co-defendants testified, his own method of insuring the testimony he wanted in court was to threaten the lives of his prisoners and their families.

As an example, P. P. Bulanoff told the court Yagoda sent a henchman to "instruct" one of the defendants in the first Moscow treason trial in August, 1936. Yagoda was said to have feared the prisoner, T. Smirnoff, would reveal too much, and later visited him personally in his cell.

Bulanoff said he gathered from subsequent talks with Yagoda "they did not have to worry about Smirnoff's behavior at the trial." Smirnoff was found guilty and executed.

Deaths Supposed Natural.

Yagoda himself, eminent physician-defendant, and other witnesses added grim details to the elaborate outline of the Trotskyist-rightist medical murder plot pictured in the indictment against the 21 defendants.

Deaths of the four men, before the trial, had been ascribed to natural causes.

Besides Yagoda, key witnesses who described the murders were Bulanoff, Yagoda's long-time secretary and yes-man; Dr. L. G. Levin, who until a few months ago was head of the Kremlin Hospital; P. P. Kruchkoff, once Gorky's private secretary; Dr. D. D. Pletnyeff, eminent heart specialist, and Dr. I. N. Kazakoff.

Bulanoff declared Yagoda plotted also to kill Nikolai Yezhoff, present secret police chief, and said that at Yagoda's orders he spread a deadly chemical around Yezhoff's office. The intended victim, then Yagoda's assistant, was to have been removed because he was uncovering details of the plot. He escaped by discovering the scheme.

Yagoda, Bulanoff said, had admired Hitler's rise to power and admired the German fuehrer's book "Mein Kampf." Soon, he said, Yagoda decided to become a Russian Hitler with Nikolai Bucharin, former government newspaper editor and now a treason defendant, as his Goebbels.

Physician "Loved Gorky."

Dr. Levin, stroking his prim, white goatee, declared Yagoda had sought removal of Gorky's son as "lazy and good for nothing" and of Menzhinsky so he could step into his job.

Yagoda, he said, bribed him with foreign wines and high living to kill Gorky by wrongful treatment. He swore that he and Kazakoff helped kill Pechkoff and Menzhinsky under Yagoda's threats against their lives. Kruchkoff said he caused Pechkoff to catch cold while drunk.

"I loved Gorky and his family," Levin said, "I thought him one of our greatest people. That is why Yagoda lies when he says I did what I did without orders. I am not afraid of death. I am 68. But he threatened to annihilate my family.

"He (Gorky) was a completely ill man. His lungs were the worst. Kruchkoff asked me what was bad for Gorky. I told him long walks, physical exercise, failure to rest after dinner.

"So he was allowed to walk for miles. . . . He was allowed to stand facing the warmth, a cold wind blowing across his back. Kruchkoff brought him up from Crimea when his grandchildren were down with the grippe. Gorky caught it in two days. It developed into double pneumonia. Pletnyeff and I used large doses of medicines which normally should be used in small doses."

Then, 10 days before Gorky's death, he said, Pletnyeff urged: "Let's give the sick man something to ease him out."

Rumania to Test Jews' Citizenship

Bucharest, Rumania, March 8 (AP). The government issuod a new decree tonight orderinng revision of all citizenship of Jews in Rumania and of Christians who were Jews before December 1, 1918.

Although only heads of families and single persons are affected by the decree, it was estimated more than 200,000 Jews and converts would have to produce birth certificates, military papers or other evidence to local courts before April 1, to prove their citizenship.

Austrian Nazis Given Equality In 3-Party Front

Schuschnigg Announces a New Concession to Democracy.

By the United Press.

Vienna, March 8. — Chancellor Schuschnigg's Fatherland Front, sole legal party in Austria, will be reorganized this week to give Nazis, monarchists and workers more influence, it was reported tonight.

The sections which will be affected are:

Social Arbeits Gemeinschaft — workers community section, composed of non-Nazi workers of the pre-dictatorship Catholic, clerical and Marxian Socialist trade unions.

The reorganization will be a concession to democracy, with Schuschnigg moving to liquidate his dictatorship to a maximum extent without disturbing the equilibrium of the country by arousing old party hates and squabbles.

Although the three sections will remain within the Fatherland Front, they will have equal privileges and be equally responsible.

As the fourth week of the "Berchtesgaden Germanic peace" began, it was understood Schuschnigg during the next few days will concentrate on negotiations of workers' demands which include:

Replacement of trade union officials by elected officers.

Return of the predictatorship workers' clubs.

Franker and more open discussion of workers' problems in the press.

Guarantees of full equality with Nazis throughout Austria regarding the holding of cultural meetings, appointment to offices and the wearing of such emblems as the predictatorship three-arrow badge of the Socialists.

Catholics, who form more than 90 per cent of the population, were more confident that no anti-religious measures would be adopted after learning that Dr. Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Nazi minister of interior, Sunday visited a Catholic monastery at Schlagel near Aigen.

Envoy Kennedy Hands Credentials to King

London, March 8 (AP).—Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, presented his credentials today to King George VI at Buckingham palace.

Viscount Halifax, British foreign minister, was present at the audience, to which the Ambassador, wearing formal evening dress, drove in semi-state in a landau provided by the palace. King George wore the full dress uniform of an admiral of the fleet.

Guerrillas Seize Dozen Towns in Japanese Rear

Invaders Bombard Cities Holding Up Crossing of Yellow River.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), March 9. Chinese reported today that guerrilla bands had recaptured a dozen towns in conquered territory north of the Yellow River, while Japanese artillery bombarded strategic cities on the south bank.

Most of the reported Chinese successes were along the Honan-Hopeh border, 40 to 60 miles behind the Japanese advance lines, which were held up by the broad river.

The Chinese also said a Chinese cavalry detachment had repulsed a Japanese drive against Lini, in southeastern Shantung, killing 500 Japanese.

Japanese artillery attacks were concentrated on Chinese positions opposite Menghsien and Wenhsien, where the Japanese hoped to cut the Lunghai Railway.

Handicapped by snow, the Japanese continued to pursue retreating Chinese in Shansi Province. The Japanese column is aimed at Tungkwan, gateway to Shensi, at the "big bend" of the river. This drive focuses attention on Siam, capital of Shansi and for 400 years capital of the Chinese empire.

In Shanghai a Japanese army spokesman estimated Chinese casualties, killed and wounded, at 800,000 in Central and North China.

Chengchow Bombed.

Shanghai (Wednesday), March 9 (U.P.).—Japan's airplanes today rained bombs on Chengchow, a key city in the northern defenses of China's provisional national capital in Hankow, while her diplomats launched a new peace offensive reportedly with British and Italian support.

In Hongkong foreign diplomats said they believed Japan was approaching "a third power," probably Italy, which might act as mediator in arranging a direct Chinese-Japanese peace conference.

In Shanghai foreign diplomats confirmed reports that a new peace effort was under way but said that so far the Japanese have not been able to induce any third power to accept the role of mediator.

Batista Thwarts Train Dynamiting

Havana, March 8 (AP).—A high government official said tonight that antigovernment plotters had schemed to dynamite the train which carried Col. Fulgencio Batista from Santiago to Banes, on his recent trip to Oriente Province.

Although several soldiers and sailors were involved, none of the high army or navy officers supported them. Two civilians and two noncommissioned navy officers were killed when troops raided a cave yesterday near Havana.

Man Who Got Pu-Yi To Cut Pigtail Dead

London, March 8 (AP).—Sir Reginald Fleming Johnston, who persuaded Manchukuo's Emperor Kang Teh to cut off his pigtail, died Sunday in an Edinburgh nursing home, it was announced today.

Sir Reginald became tutor to the young Emperor in 1919 and helped him select the name Henry, for Henry Pu-Yi, which he used before his coronation in 1934.

Levine Home Activity Hints Kidnap Contact

New Rochelle, N. Y., March 8 (U.P.). Activity of three men about the home of Murray Levine, whose 12-year-old son Peter was kidnaped 11 days ago, indicated an attempt was being made to make contact with the boy's abductors, a reliable source revealed today.

5 Dope Peddlers Caught in Paris on Tip From America

Paris, March 8 (AP).—The Surete Nationale announced today the arrest of five men in the Montparnasse quarter on charges of engaging in the narcotics traffic.

Officers said they acted upon information from United States police who arrested 15 persons, including a number of women, in Washington. It was said those arrested made the acquaintance of American woman visitors at the Paris Exposition in 1937 and sent them narcotics disguised as household articles after they returned home.

H. J. Anslinger, narcotics director, said last night he had requested information of the arrests and background from Paris.

Police Slaying Of BerserkMan Held Needless

2 Killers of Knife Wielder in Technical Custody Pending Inquiry.

Two policemen were under technical arrest last night after they shot and killed a colored mental patient in a gun and knife battle in the 2400 block of Ontario road northwest.

The officers—R. M. Henry, of the Third Precinct, and J. W. Nally, of the Tenth Precinct—each fired two shots into the body of Leroy Kays, 38-year-old war veteran, who barricaded himself in a first-floor room of his home, 2470 Ontario road.

Investigation Ordered.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, said a "routine investigation" of the shooting was under way. An inspector and two captains, he said, have been assigned to conduct the inquiry.

"All facts will be presented to a coroner's jury," said Maj. Brown. "No date has been set for an inquest, but we already have several witnesses who are ready to testify."

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jackson, who occupy an apartment in the Keys house, said the policemen shot "without provocation."

"It was not necessary to kill Keys," said Jackson. "He had no gun and only a small knife. He could have been removed from the house and subdued with tear gas and a fire hose."

Keys Screams Defiance.

Tear gas, police reported, was useless, because Keys had smashed all the windows.

The crazed victim, brandishing a butcher knife, was observed by Policemen Henry and J. W. Lewis, jr., in front of the Ontario road house shortly before 6:30 a. m. When they sought to question him, Keys ran into his home and locked the door.

As the policemen approached the house they were met with a barrage of knives and automobile tools. Keys smashed a window and screamed:

"I'll cut off your heads and kill myself if you come through that door."

When efforts to force the man out with tear gas had failed, the policemen summoned an ambulance from Emergency Hospital. Dr. A. F. Anderson attempted to persuade Keys to abandon his siege, but was rebuffed with another barrage of tools and knives. Police reserves were also called.

All Night Rampage.

Then, waving a flaming torch of newspapers, the enraged colored man set fire to curtains and furniture. The Fire Department was called.

At this point, fearing other occupants of the house would burn or be injured by the deranged colored man, Nally and Henry fired into the blazing room. Keys was struck in the abdomen and staggered to an upstairs bedroom, where he was found dead when the officers forced entrance.

The colored man's sister, Lottie Mitchell, who had hidden in an another room of the house, said her brother had "been on a rampage all night. Her mother, she said, who could usually "calm" the man, was not at home.

Keys served in the Navy in the World War. He had been under the care of a physician for several years.

Slaying Condemned.

The James Reese Europe Post No. 5, American Legion at its regular meeting last night denounced the "unwarranted and brutal killing" of LeRoy Keys.

Resolutions were adopted asking for an immediate investigation of the killing by the police and to transmit the opinion of the post to Maj. Brown and the District Commissioners.

A committee that was appointed to investigate the matter included George W. Rycraw, Albert L. Dunlap, William Kelson, and Robert Green.

Pendergast Victor In Kansas City, 2-1

Kansas City, March 8 (AP).—Tom Pendergast's Democratic organization got two votes for every one polled by an opposition slate today at a primary supervised by a new bi-partisan election board under orders from the State's Governor to guard against repetition of the 1936 vote fraud scandals.

Mayor Bryce B. Smith, regular Democrat seeking re-election, got 69,051 votes to 30,180 for the coalition's mayoralty nominee, Col. Fred Whitten, in 375 out of 460 precincts.

Approximately 120,000 votes were cast out of a total primary registration in excess of 190,000.

The Pendergast organization was ordered to get out its vote today and the army of experienced workers responded.

Luigi Federzoni To Head Italian Royal Academy

Rome, March 8 (AP).—Appointment of Luigi Federzoni as president of the Royal Academy of Italy to succeed the late Gabriele d'Annunzio was interpreted tonight as a political move toward reorganization of the Chamber of Deputies as a corporative chamber.

Literary circles said Federzoni had been a strong adherent to fascism, but had made no recognized contribution to Italian literature, was not a member of the academy, and did not enjoy universal artistic renown, as did other academicians such as Pietro Mascagni, the composer.

Federzoni, a novelist and critic, is president of the Senate and a member of the Fascist Grand Council.

His departure from his Senate post May 1, it was said, would open the way for selection of a younger and more active man to head the new Chamber of Guilds. The Fascist Grand Council is expected to take final action on the long-pending chamber reform Thursday.

D. C. Man Killed In Mo. Car Crash

Thomas J. Walden, jr., 22, of 1215 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, was killed at Cassville, Mo., Sunday when his car plunged over an embankment, the Associated Press reported.

Walden, who was employed as an elevator operator at the new House Office Building, left Washington a week ago to visit his home in Eureka Springs, Ark. He was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Irene Buete, of Berwyn, Md. She escaped uninjured.

Walden's wife, whom he married a year ago, and another sister, Miss Elva Walden, left here for Arkansas yesterday. The youth, a son of a prominent Democrat in Carroll County, Ark., came to Washington two years ago. He was an expert violinist and played in several orchestras here.

South Sea Outposts.

At a time when apostles of isolation are strong in the land, the United States Government has taken steps to extend its sovereignty over two remote islands in the South Pacific. The move seems like a throw-back to the days of Manifest Destiny.

But this seeming contradiction is easily resolved. In a rapidly shrinking world isolationism represents a nostalgic yearning rather than a practical political doctrine. Viewed in terms of future needs the logic of this territorial acquisition is obvious.

Present success in trans-Pacific air service points the way to further developments. In addition to the San Francisco-Manila line other routes are contemplated, to Australia and New Zealand, for instance. To make these routes feasible, landing places and refueling depots must be found, preferably under American sovereignty. To that end the Government has now moved to take over Canton and Enderbury islands, of the Phoenix group. Other tiny uninhabited islets, to which a rightful American claim can be advanced, may be claimed later.

In a statement issued by the President it is categorically denied that any motive other than the interests of commercial aviation was responsible for the occupation of the two Phoenix islands. But since the significance of these acquisitions lies in the future, there is at least a possibility that strategic factors constitute an added incentive for the step.

It is to be noted that the islands lie along the line of communication between Hawaii and Samoa. They, and others that might be added to them, could serve as a screen blocking attack from the west on the Panama Canal. All this may play a part in the move to plant the American flag permanently upon the coral reefs of Canton and Enderbury.

If these islands are valuable to us, it is not surprising that they should be regarded wishfully by others. But it is very unlikely that any squabble over ownership in this matter will arise to cause disturbance to Anglo-American relations. In view of the parallel lines of policy being pursued by Great Britain and the United States in the Pacific the British may at heart be happy to have us add to our possessions there, particularly if the acquisitions consist of atolls of no commercial value. Moreover, there are many similar uninhabited pinpoints on the charts of that section of the Pacific where the rule of "findings keepings" still holds good.

Echoing Mr. Eden.

With sound instinct, British politicians long ago discovered that the best time to make concessions to opponents is after these opponents have been routed.

This instinct Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain demonstrated in his speech before the House of Commons Monday. At the time of Anthony Eden's resignation as foreign secretary, Chamberlain won a substantial vote of confidence. On that occasion he had ridden rough-shod over the opposition, scorned their dislike for any deals with dictators, mocked their continued faith in the League of Nations and collective security. Sure of a continued majority in the Commons, for as long as the present mandate of Parliament runs, Chamberlain could easily have continued on his line of attack.

Monday's debate showed that he has not chosen to pursue so intransigeant a course. He realizes that popular sentiment is far more in favor of Eden's ideas than present parliamentary majorities would indicate. He knows, since his party rode to power on a pro-League platform, that the belief in collective security remains an article of faith with many Englishmen, Conservatives as well as Laborites and Liberals.

And, above all, he realizes that to flout the sentiments of these millions would render imperative the success of the negotiations he has undertaken with Mussolini, and hopes soon to initiate with Hitler. That would mean putting all his political eggs in what may prove, as Eden suspects, a flimsy basket.

So Chamberlain, while justifying his program of seeking to make a deal with the dictators, now goes out of his way to proclaim himself a firm believer in democracy and a hater of the totalitarian idea. His references to the League of Nations are now flattering. Its ideals, he said, were "grand, magnificent" and must ultimately prevail. And to show that he realizes the necessity of a change of course should his negotiations with Rome and Berlin fail, he demands increased expenditures for armaments. Furthermore he said: "I want to make known that our desire for peace does not signify willingness to purchase peace today at the price of peace hereafter."

In speaking thus Chamberlain was mirroring the views of Anthony Eden and unconsciously stressing the essential continuity of British foreign policy.

Seventeenth Trade Agreement.

A comparatively small volume of import and export trade is directly affected by the tariff reductions and other concessions embodied in the agreement which the Department of State has just concluded with Czechoslovakia. But the importance of these reciprocal agreements lies in their cumulative rather than their individual effect. They are the result of a modest but persistent determination to lower trade barriers and to prevent new ones from being erected. With seventeen treaties now concluded the sum total of specific concessions, which under our policy of most-favored-nation treatment are generalized, has long ceased to be insignificant.

It is noteworthy that the present agreement survived strongly organized attack by domestic shoe manufacturers opposed to any lowering of duties on imported footwear. The final accord provides seemingly ample safeguards by providing that tariffs may be raised in case annual imports of shoes from all countries exceed 1¼ per cent of the domestic output. According to the Department of State this proviso "in effect so limits these concessions as to assure to the domestic shoe producer close to 99 per cent of the total United States market and well over 99 per cent of it in value."

That being the case, and considering that the shoe industry of Czechoslovakia creates a demand for American raw materials, it is very difficult to sustain the argument that our limited concessions in this or other fields involve any risks of market demoralization. Moreover, in return for our tariff reductions and agreements not to raise duties on a large number of items entering this country, Czechoslovakia has liberalized or eliminated import quotas on commodities of particular interest to American exporters. "Probably no other country," it is officially stated, "has gone so far . . . in attempting to open the way for an expansion of trade by the removal or relaxation of special controls and imports other than duties."

The present trade agreement has political as well as economic significance for a country in the critical position of Czechoslovakia, a lone democratic state encircled by totalitarian nations. It would, of course, be entirely unwarranted for us to negotiate trade treaties with a view to achieving unacknowledged political ends. Nevertheless, we may feel justly gratified if, as a result of trade concessions made to further our own economic interests, we incidentally strengthen the hand of a government which owes much to American inspiration and political ideals.

The Czechoslovakian treaty, concluded in an atmosphere of political tension and in face of opposition from some domestic interests, provides encouraging support for the belief that where there is a will to facilitate the exchange of goods between nations, the way can always be found.

Widening The Tax Field.

By a 5-to-2 vote over-ruling previous decisions the Supreme Court has held that the Federal Government can tax income from oil and gas lands leased from a State. The precise question at issue concerned the right to tax an oil company on income obtained from school lands leased from the State of Wyoming.

Undoubtedly a tax levied upon income from such sources affects the ability of the State to raise money for school purposes, as Justice Butler pointed out in his dissenting opinion. But it is also true, as Chief Justice Hughes stated in delivering the majority opinion, that the power to tax should not be crippled "by extending the constitutional exemption from taxation to these subjects which fall within the general application of nondiscriminatory laws, and where no direct burden is laid upon the governmental instrumentality and there is only remote, if any, influence upon the exercise of the functions of government."

It is, in short, largely a matter of judgment where the line shall be drawn between taxes that interfere with the exercise of governmental functions and those that do not. In the days when sources of tax income were abundant and governmental functions severely limited, the courts naturally felt inclined to exempt from taxation all transactions that might be regarded as connected with State or Federal governmental operations. Today, circumstances make it necessary to revise these earlier views and modify opinions out of harmony with present realities.

With governmental functions rapidly multiplying, and governmental operations extending into lines of activity once reserved to private business, tax exemption for income derived indirectly from exploitation of leased governmental property, or from contract work done for the Government, simply has to be abandoned. Otherwise the growing volume of tax-exempt income would mean extra heavy burdens upon a shrinking volume of taxable income.

The Supreme Court has changed its mind in the interests of realism. Furthermore, the reasoning on which the decision is based seems cogent. The chief objection is that many business arrangements made for the benefit of Indians and school children will, as the dissenting minority says, be threatened. But against that misfortune has to be weighed the larger future benefits of removal of irrational tax-exemption privileges.

Freedom Of The Press?

Dr. Otto Dietrich's contention that freedom of the press does not exist in the United States would scarcely be worthy of notice were it not for the fact that it echoes loose statements frequently made by Americans.

The Nazi press chief takes much the same attitude as did the fox who, having lost his tail, began preaching on the disadvantages of caudal appendages. Freedom of the press is one of the great delusions of history because there is none in Germany. That belief illustrates how thinking at Berlin has been warped by the substitution of official propaganda for free and independent discussion.

In contending that the American press is not free Dr. Dietrich quoted a number of American writers. Perhaps, too, he had in mind Secretary Ickes' reference to "kept newspapers and kept commentators." There have been several indications that Mr. Ickes also questions the freedom of the press because it does not always regard him as the fountain-head of wisdom. In any event, that general attitude is expressed with sufficient frequency to warrant a careful analysis.

Freedom of the press does not imply that every individual with a viewpoint to expound can claim unlimited space in the newspapers. Each paper must be its own judge of what is news and fair comment thereon. If its judgment is poor, that fact will probably be reflected in the degree of public support it is granted. There are many ways in which a community can shape a newspaper in its own image. But the individual who thinks that freedom of the press guarantees him unlimited privileges of placing his own prejudices before the public is likely to continue being disappointed.

Nor does freedom of the press imply that the newspapers must hypocritically indorse every Townsend plan or other political or economic shibboleth which may happen to be popular. If the press is worth its salt, it will think deeper on many issues than the man in the street. The very fact that the press sometimes appears to be almost unanimous in opposing some officially-sponsored policy is one indication of its freedom.

As a matter of fact, however, every shade of opinion is reflected in the press of the United States today. We have Communist papers as well as capitalist papers. Labor has its special organs as well as employers. There is an active clerical press and both the Democratic and Republican Parties claim papers which cling to narrowly partisan views. Fortunately, however, there is a growing tendency for newspapers of the better type to follow a really independent policy. Their objective is not to promote any particular cause, belief or dogma, but to serve what they conceive to be the public interest to the best of their untrammeled ability. In that attitude may be found the very essence of freedom of the press.

If we could define a free press as one that never arouses antagonism in the mind of a single prejudiced reader, then the newspapers of the United States could not qualify for that designation. But to share that opinion with Dr. Dietrich would be virtually to say that the press is not free because it is free.

If the New York world fair authorities know their stuff, they will insure themselves against the probability that the world will fall to pieces before they can hold a fair for it.

A Michigan judge rules that a man has a legal right to kiss a woman other than his wife. Trouble is, however, a man is considerably more afraid of his wife than he is of the law.

The diagnostic ability of the doctor of 50 years ago was extremely limited. About all he could tell from an examination was whether a person was well, bilious or dead.

"Our attractions positively will not include any fan dancers," declares a New York world fair official. Oh, well; a lot of us never did care much for fans.

"Gannett For President."

From the Hartford Courant.

Mr. Frank E. Gannett, who operates from Rochester a chain of some 20 newspapers, has been proposed for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1940. The movement has not yet assumed formidable proportions, nor has Mr. Gannett made known his attitude toward it. It may be assumed, however, that he would be willing to make the required sacrifice if the call should come.

When there was some talk in 1936 of Senator Borah, Mr. Gannett indicated his willingness to go on the ticket with him. The comparative obscurity of the Vice Presidency was certainly nothing he hankered for, but if he could be of service as a candidate for that humble office his party had only to say the word. From this it may be inferred that although he would much prefer to be the quiet overlord of his newspaper empire he could not, consistently with his patriotism and his understanding of the country's needs, well refuse to enter upon the arduous duties of a campaign and possibly burden himself with the cares of the Presidency.

"Gannett for President" has already become a slogan which no longer can be buried on the back pages of his newspapers.

Homely Health Hint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It should be compulsory for all persons handling food, in homes or restauranis, to have tubercular and syphilis tests.

In some States it is a law that you must have your automobile tested each year, and who is "so penny wise and pound foolish" that he does not have the machine of his car thoroughly gone over at regular intervals?

And yet the intricate machinery of the human body is allowed to run on without being checked and double-checked until something breaks down from disease or strain, because it is too expensive to see a doctor just because one is feeling tired.

Let this generation start the ball rolling toward health for those too proud for charity medical clinics and too poor for specialists and insist on a flat fee for frequent, thorough physical examinations.

Let us also employ our household help from employment bureaus that insist on physical examination certificates and eat in restaurants that display a card that all employes are tubercular and syphilis tested.

Maryland Whippings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your article about the beating of the man in Maryland by the law. I cannot see where the law by using the same method on the man as the man used on his wife helped the man or brought justice.

This man by his action showed that he needed help of some one to show him the use of tolerance and understanding in his domestic life. The law showed its ignorance in its action toward the man, and by its action only embittered this man and gave him fear and dislike for the law which is supposed to help us in our difficulties as well as punish when we disobey it. I think the people of Maryland will agree with me that the action of the law in this case will not help this man become a better citizen, nor will it help him to understand himself and his wife.

The law used the old method of an eye for eye, tooth for tooth. This method of dealing with human beings has proved itself a failure. And not only is it a failure but it tends to pour oil on the fire. Why, then, does the law keep on using it? The law in this case lowered itself in my estimation as it did with all people to whom I have talked on this subject.

The law was not made to stand as a mighty punishing arm alone. It was also made to see that justice is done. If we are to keep faith with the law, the law must keep faith with us. The law must stand for the betterment of the people as well as punishment.

Friend Of The Negro.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The death of George Foster Peabody marks the passing of a broad-gaged American whose catholic sympathies envisioned the varied and many-sighted interests of the American people without regard to race, class, creed or sectional divisions.

Born in the South in the early '50s, he went North after the Civil War, where his career became vitally related to the industrial business, religious, educational and civic activities during the past 50 years. With him sectional lines were obliterated and North and South were but component parts of his beloved country.

We extol Gen. O. O. Howard and the missionaries who followed in the wake of the Northern Army to impart the beginnings of a better life for the benighted freedmen as embodying the ideal philanthropic spirit. Although they had neither silver nor gold they devoted themselves to human service. Mr. Peabody gave generously of his sympathy and service as well as financial contribution to all worthy causes.

Perhaps no man of his day and generation evinced a wider range of sympathy, altruistic devotion and service. Though a son of the South and true to its best traditions, and also a lifelong member and high official in the Democratic Party, he was ever vocal in the assertion of his belief that the Negro should enjoy the full measure of his rights guaranteed by the Constitution, not for the mere abstract enjoyment, but because he vitally needs those rights for his protection.

If his broad sympathies and humanitarian impulse had any special application it was exerted in behalf of the Negro race. This was no maudlin sentimentality on his part, but because he felt that the Negro as the man farthest down stood most deeply in need of his sympathy and benefaction.

Mr. Peabody gave to the colored young men of his native city, Columbus, Ga., the first Y. M. C. A. building in the history of that organization. He was a trustee of Hampton and Tuskegee and was a lifelong friend and firm believer in the work and worth of Booker T. Washington. Mr. Peabody was endued with a noble nature—simple, sincere, generous and genial. In his death the American people have lost a genuine philanthropist and the Negro race a true and sincere friend.

Strike Losses In Puerto Rico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In touring Puerto Rico during February I was greatly impressed with the huge building program which was undertaken since my previous visit. The island is attracting tourists in increasing numbers annually.

I was, however, surprised and deeply shocked to find that as a result of the longshoremen's strike (mainly engineered from the United States), in which not more than 2,500 men were involved, a serious interruption to business resulted. Many of the important industries and farmers lost their markets during the tie-up. The island's population is approximately 1,800,000.

Not a ton of cargo was permitted to enter or leave the island, thereby causing loss of earnings to her inhabitants. In the needlework enterprise, the second largest in importance, close to 60,000 people and their families suffered deprivation for a time. The stevedores returned to work after five weeks of idleness on the basis originally offered by the steamship companies, with both sides agreeing to abide by the final decision of the Meditation Board. All this could have been avoided at the beginning of the controversy by resorting to arbitration. In my opinion such a plan is more humane and the commerce of the island would not have been disrupted.

To my knowledge, no longshoremen's strike of such magnitude had previously occurred to disrupt their commerce. It was unquestionably a complete blockade. In the past, strikes in Puerto Rico were rare and of short duration. Capital and labor promptly came to an amicable understanding, thus preventing the loss of income to all concerned.

With eight-hour labor laws for her major industries and wages which correspond with the conditions of the tropics, Puerto Ricans, aided by special trade agreements with the United States, have advantages which other groups of the West Indies lack in many respects.

"Bridge Of Rama."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Friday and Saturday evening last, at the Grafton, three plays were presented by the Washington branch of the American Pen Women. Each was well received. Two of these plays touched the infelicities and tragedies of family life, with dialogue frequently witty and humorous.

The third, the idealistic "Bridge of Rama," moving with impressive dignity and elevation of text, was written by Mrs. Lars Anderson, known on the program as Isabel Anderson. From a myth of far-away India it evolved through the tender romance of Rama and Sita and the episode of the building of a bridge between India and the Island of Ceylon, binding together the two peoples in love and amity. A narrator, in the mystical dress of seer, tells his impressive story with the droning monotony of distinctness and picture values, as weird music faintly sounds. The participants were capable and earnest, the costuming of unusual loveliness.

So, Mrs. Anderson, who, is known for her many books of wide travel, is to be congratulated for presenting this play, which gave real pleasure to a distinguished audience and touched a place in art and ideals.

Guarding Against Waste.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Persons interested in our present social security laws should be glad to note the recent action of the board in discontinuing old-age assistance to Oklahoma.

A very limited number of our people appear to realize the colossal task confronting the Social Security Board. The recent disclosures in Oklahoma where some $685,000 were "given" away have, I trust, been a warning to other States.

As a former official attached to a department administering unemployment insurance abroad, I can readily appreciate what our Government is up against here. The Oklahoma officials admitted that errors and irregularities, due, to be sure, to inexperience, had occured. A rather flimsy alibi. Errors will be made frequently regardless of the care exercised, but as to irregularities, they should never be tolerated in any department, especially where money is concerned.

In conclusion may I state that the majority of people appear to have most peculiar ideas concerning our social security laws, particularly regarding unemployment insurance?

What has occurred in Oklahoma can also happen in the other States concerned, and furthermore our departments administering benfits should cease boasting of their self-styled efficiency. It is in many cases unwarranted, as I happen to know from actual experience right here.

Congressmen's Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me to take issue with our good friend Cuthbert Mortimer, of the illustrious Zilch clan, whose letter was published March 7.

Yes, it seems we must agree that the Congressman is sacrificing personal financial security to accept such a meager lot as that afforded a public servant. Like hell he is!

I suppose Cuthbert Mortimer would welcome a drive to raise funds to pay the Congressman's admission to see "Snow White," or perhaps a drive to endow a home for wayward termites.

Poor fellows—only $10,000 a year—and the Government clerks making all of $1,600 a year has to park his "lizzie" in the "pirate" cove or submit to a stiff fine. Please let us not be so harsh with Cuthbert Mortimer Zilch as to suspect that he thinks the Government clerk is not as good as the Congressman.

Oscar.

OSCAR, who is a mouse, made the newspapers a day or two ago when he turned up suddenly in the traffic division's collateral office at Police Headquarters and frightened a young lady who was paying a traffic fine. She went scrambling out of the building, and Oscar started making tracks, too, probably in the direction of the press room, where we all know and love him.

Because Oscar is really a kind-hearted mouse, with the best of intentions, really quite well-mannered, and respected and admired by his many friends, his life story is probably in order now. Otherwise, the story about frightening the young lady may leave a false impression of Oscar's true self.

Actually, the lady-frightening Oscar is probably Oscar XXIX or XXX, maybe more. The original Oscar was born, cavorted and died on the field of honor—defending himself against the environment of Police Headquarters—many years ago. But each succeeding generation has remained just Oscar, plain, with no numerals. This was not always so, but after the successive Oscars started to rival the Kings of France for X's and V's and I's, we gave up. So now Oscar is sort of immortal, you might say, though he dies or is killed quite regularly. I hope you get the idea.

That might mean that each and every mouse around headquarters is automatically Oscar, but that's not true. The headquarters variety of mouse is not hard to distinguish; he has a certain appeal, a willingness to cavort and gambol, a definite lack of timidity sometimes bordering on aggressiveness, that marks him as a true Oscar. And rank interlopers, probably moseying over from Police Court across the street, are quickly detected and put to rout; often Oscar himself takes care of this, judging by the number of squeals. Sometimes, however, the janitor cleans up the press room, which automatically abolishes the playground for all mice except Oscar, who knows the building intimately and has no fear of even Inspector Thompson's office.

Poor Oscar really had a hell of a life. He has been lassoed, imprisoned in milk bottles, kicked at, squashed, intoxicated, starved, overfed, neglected, cajoled, flattered and occasionally killed.

One of the clerks in the Detective Bureau, who worked regularly from midnight to 8 a. m. for many months, started cultivating Oscar a while back. Now, after weeks of training, he has mastered the art of lassoing Oscar, who doesn't seem to mind particularly. I don't know how it is done—the clerk refuses to divulge his technique—but every week or so the clerk leads Oscar back to the press room, a thin string around his neck. There we'll tie up Oscar, forget about him, and half an hour later he's managed to escape. Next thing you know, Oscar is back behind the radiator, gnawing away at a pile of waste paper.

A couple of months ago Oscar got quite drunk and was pretty disgusting. He lapped up some spilled liquor and then started wandering all over the floor; he even hiccoughed, and showed conclusively that he can't hold his liquor worth a nickel. I don't know whether Oscar had ulcers or cirrhosis of the liver or just a poetic, sensitive soul; anyway, he was dead when we came to work next day. Probably the hangover got him. But one of Oscar's children showed up a few hours later and . . . "Oscar is dead; long live Oscar!"

It's not difficult to get Oscar cornered, but if you do have trouble capturing him the desk clerk will gladly lasso him. The real difficulty is to keep Oscar confined anywhere. A milk bottle should make an ideal prison, with its slippery sides, but somehow he always manages to get away. Sometimes I think Oscar could have taught Houdini a thing or two.

Generally speaking, he's very good-natured, though he does squeal a bit when you step on him—he often gets underfoot, literally. Only once have I known him to lose his temper. That was when the desk clerk had him tied up and was feeding him pieces of bread. The clerk stopped for a moment to answer the phone, and Oscar was irked by the delay and promptly bit him on the finger. Neither of them died.

He's had quite a life—all 30 or more of them. And he's a real part of headquarters. Now and then someone tries to bring in a cat and establish him as the press-room guardian. But a cat has never stayed more than an hour or two; Oscar is much too quick for them.

The disturbance in the collateral office was really unfortunate, and Oscar naturally feels a little upset, I'm sure. (Though he didn't actually read the papers, he eats them regularly, so, of course, he must know of his notoriety.) And for the last day or so he's been a trifle subdued, unusualy quiet. He'll recover in time, however.

Oscar's future is a little shady right now. (His past is postively black.) He must have noticed in the papers he munches on regularly that Congress plans to provide a new headquarters building shortly, and he's probably wondering what will happen to him. But I imagine Oscar will show up in the building even before it is finished, again making his headquarters in the press room. The place wouldn't seem quite right without him.

Hollywood Bolos.

LOS ANGELES, March 8.—The ink-stained wretches who drew from $200 to $2,000 a week for writing moving picture plays have ruined many old friendships in the interests of compulsory harmony. This is not a unique experience, for members of other trades of more or less intellectual kind who joined sewing circle unions a few years ago have discovered themselves drinking in two distinct groups at far ends of the old saloon—the bolos at the extreme left—and glaring at one another in the mirror.

Although it is no libel to call a man a Liberty Leaguer in this country, or even a Republican, it is, rather oddly, a serious offense to call a Communist a Communist.

Communists, for some reason, resent being called Communists, and the most that may be said prudently is that they reveal Communistic sympathies.

This is the most that may be said of a number of diligent individuals whose membership in the Screen Writers Guild of the Authors League has driven a band of other writers, including some former Guilders, into a rival or defensive union and a number of others into a No-Man's Land between the two camps.

• • • •

UNQUESTIONABLY THERE are undercover Communists in the writing business here who would like to impose the closed shop and, by adroit but recognizable methods, exclude from the screen ideas contrary to their own. The dissenters may have been unnecessarily alarmed, overestimating their influence, but, in any case, it was to prevent regimentation and the political discipline of ideas that they formed the Screen Playwrights' Association, which is now called a house union. Radicals are rather free with their use of such words as "fink," "scab" and "house union" toward those who jerk away from their attempts to coerce and terrorize, but any mention of Communism in connection with their activities is denounced as Red-baiting.

James K. McGuinness, who wrote sport for $90 a week on the old Evening Telegram in New York and now gets $1,500 a week for writing dramas in Hollywood, was one of the organizers of the Screen Writers' Guild. He broke away and joined the Screen Playwrights in resentment against authority of the Authors' League of New York and certain peculiarities of the constitution. Dudley Nichols, also an old reporter, is now president of the Screen Playwrights and is himself no radical but only a liberal.

However, when asked whether there are Communists in the guild, Mr. Nichols unerringly calls the roll of the very ones who are commonly known as writers of Communistic sympathies. He insists, undoubtedly with truth, that he does not know this or that one's politics and is not interested because one's politics is none of the guild's business.

• • • •

ASIDE FROM their aversion to unity with active, untiring radicals and their suspicion of everything they do in union matters, the rebellious writers absolutely refuse to consider a closed shop or even that modern subterfuge, the guild shop. They also cite an article in the constitution which empowers guild meetings to levy assessments on their salaries, based upon earnings, which "need not be uniform but may be levied on ability to pay" or "in such manner as the executive board, with the concurrence of a majority of the active members who vote thereon, shall see fit."

It is also provided that any member who the executive board deems guilty of conduct prejudicial to the welfare of the league or the guild may be expelled—a death sentence under closed or guild shop. Under certain conditions, not beyond imagining, if the Communists or the Fascists should obtain a closed shop or guild shop and a working majority, conduct prejudicial to the league or guild might consist of a politically offensive scenario.

True, means of appeal are provided, but the delay of vindication and reinstatement conceivably could cost the defendant member much at $1,500 or $2,000 a week. And, in any case, a majority is empowered to silence the greatest living writer who might be right, through a minority of one against all the rest. Of course, the same applies to the worst living writer. There is a tempting thought in that.

The Once Over

Elmer Feels A Little Dry.

"It looks to me," declared Elmer Twitchell, the well-known man about town, stamp collector and pheasant fancier, "like the liquor interests have forgotten all the lessons of the past and are in a sweat to bring back prohibition."

"What makes you think so?" we asked the eminent hog caller and Tuscan pottery expert.

"There are few angles that don't make me think so," snapped Elmer, "but first and foremost is the way the cafes, cocktail lounges, saloons or whatever you may call 'em, are socking the cash customers and building up a new all-time high in drinking-circle resentment."

• • • •

The drinking public squawked loudly about what it was maced for likker back in the speakeasy era," continued Mr. Twitchell, "and all the exponents of repeal were filling the air with talk about restoring to the common man his right to buy a drink without being robbed. But with repeal in its fourth year have you noticed much of a change?"

• • • •

"You have not!" barked Elmer, answering his own question. "The retailers are not showing the customer as much consideration as most of the bootleggers did. If the old-time speakeasy boss had any good liquor he would let some of it trickle through to the consumer. What does the proprietor of a modern cafe do? He puts in a bar-liquor of the cheapest grade he can buy, charges from 30 to 40 cents a drink for bilge and if you want anything better you have to name it and pay through the nose!

• • • •

"He acts as if he hated to sell any of the better grade stuff. Why, if you name a liquor that is even a half a grade above his run-of-the-mill booze the price goes up from a dime to a quarter a shot.

• • • •

"It's a common practice to charge 60 cents or more for any highball not made from the bar liquor. And, I ask you, isn't that a dime higher than we paid back in the speakeasies and hideaways? As I see it, repeal has brought the drinking public very little except the right to drink on the ground floor, enter without giving the password and get a little fresher air.

"Back before prohibition we had the 15-cent, two-for-a-quarter highball everywhere. I ain't saying they could afford to restore prices to that level, but by charging all the traffic will bear the liquor boys are just paving the way for another prohibition drive, and when it comes a lot of drinkers will take the it-serves-'em-right attitude."

• • • •

"You wouldn't want prohibition back, would you, Mr. Twitchell?" we asked the prominent etcher, ornithologist and needle-point worker.

• • • •

"I haven't reached that point today as yet," he replied, "but around 5 p. m. when I go into one of these modern pink and gold open-faced emporiums, order a drink of fairly decent liquor and get a check for 60 cents for it I'll be shoutin' for Pussyfoot Johnson, Mrs. Catt and the ax squad!"

No Chance.

It is estimated that there will be 9,384,000 people in Greater New York by 1960. This seems absurd; you can't get that number of people to stand in a bunch and watch an automatic snow-remover at work.

California Flood

Destruction Caused By Raging Waters Would Have Been Greater But For Recently Built Flood Control System, Observer Writes.

By Elmer T. Peterson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Los Angeles.

IF IT HADN'T been for the new $50,000,000 flood control system in Los Angeles County, the damage by the recent flood would have been infinitely greater.

That is the typical reaction of the typical California southland booster, always optimistic.

Five days of almost continuous rainfall brought more than 10 inches of water to the Los Angeles area, in the storms beginning Sunday, February 27. In some of the mountain areas the precipitation reached cloudburst proportions, and the canyon torrents washed out homes, bridges, roads and property of various kinds, causing much loss of life. At this writing there are 50 known dead and more than 100 missing. Many of those who lost their lives were the victims of their own curiosity. In one case, near Long Beach, a wooden bridge collapsed with its load of sight-seers, carrying ten to their deaths.

The control of floods in this mountain coast area is a different proposition than that of the vast and more or less flat alluvial areas of the Mississippi Basin and its tributaries. Here the flood process is a short one, involving only a few days, and steep gradients with very fast water.

Four years ago there was a bad flood in this district, and this spurred the plans for a more extensive control program. This program included 14 dams, many of them high in the mountains, forming reservoirs with a combined capacity of 105,336 acre-feet. The dams have spillways for the release of surplus waters, the object being to regulate the flow of the surplus so that it does not rush down the canyons so impulsively. One lesson of the recent flood is that the system needs to be enlarged to still greater proportions. The lower lands can take care of the run-off, even when there is an excessive rainfall such as that recently witnessed, but the ultimate aim is to fix things so that the mountain water is held back until it has a chance to seep into the ground or behave in an orderly manner, in the spillways and channels provided.

Soil Absorbs Water Readily.

AS STATED in a recent article, one of the prime functions of the mountain and upland dams is to "sink" the water—not merely to hold back in a reservoir. Experience has proved that the water which seeps into the ground is just as valuable a resource as that which is visible in the basins, if not more valuable, for it raises the water table, creates springs and slow seepage, and provides a great natural reserve for the dry months. The terrain is well suited to this scheme, for the soil is porous and sandy, absorbing water readily and deeply.

As a matter of fact, if the soil on the mountain slopes and flat fields of Southern California had been of black gumbo or clay or other compact soil which is predominant in the Middle West, the flood would have been far more catastrophic. The absorptive power of the land in this area is amazing. Some statistician figured that four and three-quarters trillion pounds of water fell on Los Angeles County during the recent storm period. Its potency as a resource as well as a menace to life and property can well be imagined.

As it was, the torrents from the spillways were too large for comfort.

The reader who has visited Los Angeles may visualize the setting.

North of Los Angeles is a range of small mountains—the Santa Monica Mountains and the Hollywood Hills. Skirting the eastern heights, near Griffith Park, is the Los Angeles River—usually a dusty bed, like a desert "wash." This curves north-westerly into the San Fernando Valley. The river runs southward and empties into the ocean near Long Beach.

Northerly and then eastward there rises a higher range, loosely called the Sierra Madres and San Gabriel Mountains, stretching eastward to San Bernardino and beyond. This range includes Mount Wilson, of the famed astronomical observatory, and Mount Lowe. In the various mountains and hills are located the 14 dams.

The Los Angeles River was one of the worst cut-ups, causing floods in the San Fernando Valley, at Glendale and other points. The San Gabriel and Hondo rivers and minor streams became major problems. Farther east and southeast, the Santa Ana River also did great damage.

IF YOU HAVE seen the Rose Bowl, you remember that it lies in Arroyo Seco, which means "dry ravine." Above the Rose Bowl is Devil's Gate Dam. This dam was filled and the spillway let 10,000 cubit feet of water per second rush down the ravine.

Only a miracle saved the renowned $1,200,000 stadium from destruction. On the fourth night of the storm, the water was pouring into the pedestrian tunnels. Inside the Bowl the water covered the first four rows of seats. The Pasadena Park Department was laboring heroically, dumping sand-bags and loads of brush into protecting positions. These were lodged against the high steel fence. Nevertheless the flood was apparently bent on undermining and sweeping away the vast concrete structure. One of the ticket offices and a rest-room floated down the steam.

Suddenly, without any apparent reason, the stream veered to the right, and the crisis was over as far as the Rose Bowl was concerned, and those of you who attend next year's football game may reflect that it was only some kindly freak of nature that preserved the famous structure.

The San Gabriel No. 2 Dam spilled into the river the fourth day of the storm, with 20,000 cubic feet per second. This water, combined with that of other tributaries, poured about 100,000 cubic feet per second into San Gabriel No. 1. Here it was checked for that precious period of time in which nature adjusts herself by seepage and retarded run-off, otherwise the full volume would have been dumped into the already overloaded San Gabriel River.

This is typical of what was taking place in the other flood control systems of the county. The principal object of the control is to "knock the peak" of the flood—not to keep it entirely confined. The technique of the mountain region flood control engineer is to build a system of dams, levees, rip-rap concrete retaining walls and flood-gates, all built on the basis of past experience and hydraulic engineering. Then when a flood comes, the engineer must act quickly—keep the water spilling at a safe rate and shut it off at the proper moment. It is very much of a touch-and-go technique.

The Santa Anita Dam, above Arcadia—near the famous racktrack—was the only one of the system in which the water spilled over the top of the dam because of a sudden rush. However, no structural damage resulted.

U. S. Engineers Have Done Excellent Work.

ONE LACK in the flood control system was that of the proposed Hansen Dam, in the Tujunga Canyon. This canyon produced 40,000 cubic feet per second, which was added to the already overtaxed Los Angeles River channel.

The United States engineers, who have been doing a lot of work on the various projects, in conjunction with the Los Angeles County authorities, are given much credit for the showing made by the system, and are already at work making repairs and planning for expansion of the flood control program, based on the recent disastrous experience.

The motion picture colony of Hollywood suffered inconvenience and some loss of property, along with the rest of the people. Andy Devine lost a $10,000 riding academy. Bob Burns had $5,000 worth of landscaping washed away. Various players were marooned while on location. Several studios took an enforced lay-off, and some damage was done to buildings. However, the dictum that "the show must go on" was evident as soon as the waters receded, and Thursday it was business as usual.

One of the destructive phases of the storm was the series of landslides in the hills and mountains. The Angelus Crest road, which is the much-traveled thoroughfare from Los Angeles and Pasadena to the top of Mount Wilson, will be closed for a month or more, because of severe damage. However, this situation will not seriously impede the work of the observatory or threaten the welfare of those who live in the little settlement there.

The total propery damage of the flood cannot be estimated at this time, of course, but will mount into the millions, involving some damage to citrus fruits and other crops, as well as other items already indicated.

There is a bright side to the picture, however. The value of the moisture is inestimable, and the vast porous terrain of this area is now saturated with an incalculable amount of life-giving water, much of which can be utilized by pumping, as well as by direct feeding of vegetation, on its slow journey to the ocean during the dry season.

A Tax Theory

By Anna P. Youngman.

"Equality" And Income Taxation.

THE LATE THORSTEN VEBLEN had a deserved reputation as a destructive critic. Yet he had none of the academic economist's passion for tracking down inconsistencies of definition and exposing logical gaps in an argument. His method of attack was devastating because he directed his critical shafts against the prejudices and philosophical bias of the creators of economic theories. By mercilessly exposing the inadequacy of assumptions naively or unconsciously accepted as the basis of economic reasoning, he usually succeeded in undermining the most elaborate theoretical superstructures.

The only effective defense against this kind of assault lies in an open confession by the theorist of his beliefs or prejudices—an admission that his preconceptions are unprovable and, therefore, not subject to critical challenge. Henry C. Simons has made excellent use of this protective device in his treatise, "Personal Income Taxation," by boldly acknowledging that he regards taxation as "the proper means for mitigating inequality." He says that "the case for drastic progression in taxation must be rested on the case against inequality—on the ethical or esthetic judgment that the prevailing distribution of wealth and income reveals a degree (and/or kind) of inequality which is distinctly evil or unlovely."

Mr. Simons admits that this view takes account of the effect of progression upon distribution only, although obviously the degree of progression in a tax system "may also affect production and the size of the national income available for distribution." The author also anticipates and further disarms his critics by admitting that "increasing progression is inimical to saving and accumulation." However, the knowledge that large incomes that make saving possible may be diverted by taxation to persons with incomes too small to save does not alarm Mr. Simons. He merely says sententiously and with truth that "both progress and justice are costly luxuries."

• • • •

MR. SIMONS not only regards taxation as a means of mitigating economic inequalities but thinks that the main reliance of a good tax system must be placed upon the personal income tax, increased many fold. He accordingly selects a definition of income that is best suited to his purpose of leveling economic inequalities. Income, as he conceives it, is subjective; it does not consist of things nor does it have to be realized. It is the result of an arithmetical calculation and represents gain to someone during a specified time interval. It is neither saved nor spent, but is a measure of saving and consumption together.

Within the compass of a brief review it would be impossible to give an adequate impression of the dialectical skill with which the preferred definition of income is defended against rival conceptions. Furthermore, Mr. Simons shows an extraordinarily keen perception of the limitations and ambiguities of his own conception of income as "gain to someone during a specified period and measured according to objective market standards."

His reflections are often in the nature of abstruse but not irrelevant comments, cited to support claims for a very comprehensive definition of taxable income which at the same time makes allowance for the practical impossibility of including everything that, strictly speaking, comes under the definition.

Mr. Simons would, for example, exclude receipts in kind in computing taxable income because of difficulties of measurement, but he would include income in kind from certain durable forms of consumer capital used by the owner, such as houses and yachts. In principle he would also include under taxable income all receipts from gifts, inheritances and bequests. With minor exceptions, no limitations upon deductible losses and no concessions with respect to capital gains would be permitted.

• • • •

THE DISCUSSION of tax-exempt securities and of undistributed corporate earnings is of course related to the main topic of how best to redress inequalities. Since investment in tax-exempt securities provides avenues of escape for the wealthy, Mr. Simons has only harsh words for a system which permits of their issuance. The tax on undistributed corporate earnings, on the other hand, is not condemned so long as our system of income taxation encourages evasion through corporations. On the contrary, it is recommended that the tax on undistributed profits should be continued with gradual increases until suggested reforms in income taxation are introduced.

The argument in favor of treating gifts and inheritances as income rests upon Mr. Simons' belief that his inclusive definition of income is the best possible basis for personal taxation, most equitable and least likely to offer loopholes for tax evasion. The coexistence of death duties and gift taxes is not held to be any bar to taxation of gifts and inheritances as income. Taxation separately of such receipts at characterized as "a crude and utterly uncompensating offset to their exclusion in the determination of taxable income." He concedes, however, that inclusion of gifts and inheritances under the income tax might call for drastic change in existing death duties and gift taxes.

Special treatment of capital gains, like special treatment of gifts and inheritances, is also held to be particularly objectionable because of its inequity and the opportunities afforded for evasion.

The author's indifference to the fact that taxes are levied to produce revenue is strikingly illustrated by his reply to the argument that disregard of both gains and losses on capital assets is desirable on revenue grounds. "This maximum revenue criterion," he says, "deserves little consideration . . . It is the main purpose of the income tax to secure an equitable, progressive distribution of tax burdens among individuals."

• • • •

AT THE END of the dissertation one is left wondering just why equity should call for a normal income tax rate of 20 per cent (as proposed by Mr. Simons) without increase of the effective rates at the top of the scale. If equity (which appears to imply equality of income) is to be the goal of endeavor, it seems that rates of taxation should be adjusted to bring about the desired leveling. In fact, an ideally equitable system, as conceived by Mr. Simons, ought to bring all incomes down to the level of the lowest group.

Mr. Simons does not flinch at the thought that his proposed system would "produce great bulges of revenue during periods of unusual business prosperity; and the full deduction of losses would greatly aggravate the decline of collections during depression—not to mention the decline of death rates and of gift transfers." These wide fluctuations are regarded as one of the greatest merits of the scheme. We need deficits during depressions, Mr. Simons believes, because they have a reflationary effect.

All these unorthodox conclusions will annoy conventional thinkers and irritate practical minded men. But to the many, who believe in using the tax system as a means of redistributing individual wealth, this book is recommended for close study. It shows them the logical outcome of an eclectic emphasis upon a concept of social justice in taxation that ignores or minimizes practical considerations such as revenue returns and effects upon saving.

How the West Got Wild.

When we think of cruel Indians we usually think of the Sioux and the Apaches. And yet the Sioux were not really a savage race.

Chief Standing Bear, the last great leader of the Sioux, has written his autobiography and one passage follows:

"We did not think of the great open plains, the beautiful, rolling hills, the winding streams with tangled growth as 'wild.' Only to the white man was nature a 'wilderness,' and only to him was the land 'infested' with 'wild' animals and 'savage' people. To us it was tame. Earth was bountiful and we were surrounded with the blessings of the Great Mystery.

"Not until the hairy man from the East came, and, with brutal frenzy, heaped injustices upon us and the families we loved, was it 'wild' to us. When the very animals of the forest began fleeing from his approach, then it was that, for us, the 'wild West' began."

Text of Freight Rate Decision

Plea for 15 Per Cent Flat Increase Denied but Limited 10 Per Cent Raise Is Granted, Estimated to Produce Net Revenue Gain of 5 Per Cent.

Text of the conclusions of a majority of the Interstate Commerce Commission in passing on the petition of American railroads for increased freight rates, as handed down yesterday, follows:

The gravity of the issues in this proceeding has impelled us to press it to a conclusion with all the speed which is possible in a case involving every freight rate and charge in the country, consistently with the development of the requisite facts and hearing all parties interested in the result. From the entire record, including the matters hereinbefore recited, certain facts are inescapable, and we so find.

The present revenues of the applicants are inadequate, whether the simple common law tests be applied, or if they be judged by the statute with reference to their sufficiency, under honest, economical and efficient management, to provide in the public interest adequate and efficient railway transportation service at the lowest cost consistent with furnishing such service. The record shows that the existing basis of rates it not sufficient to maintain in full vigor either rail or water transportation, or to permit improvement of the relations betwen and the co-ordination of transportation by motor and other carriers.

15 Per Cent Too Much.

An increase of 15 per cent generally based upon a normal volume of traffic, as proposed, is for a larger amount than is reasonably necessary to meet the purposes of the increase, if realizable, and will be such a deterrent to traffic as to stifle movement. The addition to present rates of a lesser percentage of increase than that proposed, coupled with the increasing of the many rates which are now below levels we have already approved as reasonable, will result in a more harmonious rate structure and will compensate for the added costs shown, based on a normal flow of traffic, and will better insure such a flow of traffic than a blanket horizontal percentage increase. The present attempt to allocate the necessary increased revenue in flat amounts to be added to existing rates would be hazardous in its possible revenue results and would unduly ignore the element of distance as a measure of cost.

An attempt to state a particular sum as measuring the deficiency or which will result from our authorization would be futile, because the amount must necessarily depend upon the future course of both earnings and expenses, the one being dependent upon the unpredictable future volume of traffic, and the other upon the course of prices of materials, wages and taxes—all of which are subject to change. From the generality of this conclusion it is possible to segregate one compact body of rail carriers, namely, those comprising the Class 1 roads in the Pocahontas region, and their revenues, mainly derived from the transportation of bituminous coal, are on the whole adequate or more than adequate, but nothing indicates that the revenues or return of such lines other than from bituminous coal are above the average of other rail lines. Our conclusion embraces not only the steam railroad lines of a major character which were parties to the original petition filed with us, which became the basis for this proceeding of investigation, but also the smaller steam and electric railways, and the coastwise and inland water lines which are governed by the provisions of Part I of the interstate commerce act, and which have come into this proceeding and been heard.

Recent Raises Cited.

But upon the record we are not able to find that the imposition of horizontal increase in rates and charges of 15 per cent (subject to certain limitations attached to the proposal) upon all the present going rates and charges will result in a body of rates and charges which are on the whole, or in any region or district, just and reasonable. We conclude that the increases which were accomplished immediately before the end of the year 1936 in transcontinental rates; the flat increases made upon cotton effective July 31, 1937; those made effective early in the year 1937, as described in our report in General Commodity Rate Increases, 1937, supra, at page 673 thereof; those distinctly approved in our report in the case last cited, and made effective in November, 1937; and those which became effective on and before December 20, 1937, as the result of our order in the case last cited suspending outstanding orders to enable the publication and filing of increases on other commodities as prayed all should be considered as part and parcel of the matter we are now considering. These increases were permitted because of a general financial, economic and traffic situation which is one with that now prevalent, modified only in the degree of its intensity and by the interjection of some new elements and the elimination of others. The mount of added revenue realized by increases made effective during the progress of the proceeding last cited, or directly dependent upon the decision therein, was very substantial. In the case of bituminous coal the increase aggregated between 4 and 5 per cent. In this proceeding, which inolves revenues generally and touches all commodities, it is reasonable and just that the contributions to revenues already made in such manner should be recognized, and it would be neither just nor reasonable to pyramid percentage increases thereon equal to the percentages imposed upon commodities which were not so increased. To do so would subject such doubly-increased commodities to an undue proportion of the total transportation burden, and subject those particular descriptions of traffic to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage as compared with all other commodities.

Some Income Necessary.

In order that the revenues found not to be adequate may be made so, so far as is possible, it is just and reasonable that the body of existing rates and charges shall be increased. In determining the amounts whereby rates are inadequate, it is necessary to consider the effect on the movement of traffic of the rates as they are and as they may be increased. It is requisite for us to give weight to the conditions which prevail in the several industries of the country and to the respective general and comparative levels in market values of the various classes and kinds of commodities affected by the proposal under investigation. Giving due weight to the facts shown we conclude that it would be unjust and unreasonable to impose upon certain recognized groups of commodities, namely, products of agriculture, products of forests, and certain products of mines to the extent hereinafter indicated, the same full basis of increase in rates as upon the remaining commodities, but that a lesser amount of increase is just and reasonable to be applied upon such commodities.

We therefore find and conclude that the proposals before us have not been justified as a whole, but have been justified to the following extent:

All existing rates and charges, including those for accessorial services other than protective service against heat or cold, upon the date of this decision, including those found or prescribed by us as reasonable and not yet effective, may be increased and as increased may be maintained (subject to application of the rule of fractions suggested upon the hearing) by 10 per cent, except the rates on products of agriculture other than tropical fruits; except the rates on animals and products and the products thereof and articles taking the same rates, horses and mules not being included in this exception; and except lumber, shingles and lath, and articles taking lumber rates; and except the rates on cottonseed oil and vegetable oils, n. o. s., other than linseed oil; as to all of which excepted groups of commodities the increase in rates may be 5 per cent; and except anthracite, which may be increased 10 cents per ton of 2,000 pounds; and except bituminous coal, lignite, coke and iron ore, which commodities justly and reasonably should bear no further increases than those already imposed pursuant to authority granted in the case last cited; all import rates may be increased 10 per cent, but not to exceed the contemporaneous domestic rates increased as herein provided. But in making such increases, all effective increases accomplished under the authority of the decision last cited, or in the transcontinental rates which were increased in connection therewith as before recited, and in the cotton rates and in those on other commodities effective early in 1937 as above described, shall be taken into account and considered as part of the increases here authorized, so that the above-mentioned percentage increases shall not be made cumulative thereon. The increases authorized may not reasonably exceed the specific maxima originally proposed by the applicants to be applied upon lumber, sugar, fruits and vegetables. Such rates and charges, as those upon fresh milk and cream, and those for protective service, which applicants in their petition or on the hearing disclaimed intention to increase, are not included within this authorization and increases on them are not found to have been justified. As increased as above specified, to the extent indicated, but only to that extent, the resulting general basis of rates and charges of the carriers described will be just and reasonable.

Our outstanding orders will be modified to the extent necessary to enable the carriers which are bound thereby to publish and file schedules embodying such increases; and authority will be given by appropriate order under section 6 of the act for the publication of simple forms of supplements to existing schedules to effectuate such increases.

To permit the increased rates and charges herein authorized to be made effective at as early a date as is practicable, they may be made effective upon not less than 10 days' notice to the commission and to the general public by publishing, filing, and posting in the manner prescribed in the interstate commerce act. However, the authority granted is not to be considered as continuing beyond a reasonable period for the effectuation of the authorized rates and charges, and consequently will not apply to any rates or charges filed to become effective later than July 31, 1938.

Fourth section relief may be necessary by reason of situations which can not be foreseen at the present time, or sufficiently developed by the record. To the extent that departures may result from accomplishing the increases herein authorized, temporary relief from the long-and-short haul and aggregate-of-intermediates clauses of the fourth section of the act will be granted, to and including November 1, 1938.

It is understood that in the process of making effective the increases herein authorized the relations between the various ports now existing as differentials will be promptly restored and maintained until modified pursuant to law.

When tariffs provide that switching charges of other carriers will be absorbed subject to stated maximum absorptions, such maximum absorptions should be increased in the same percentage as the charges. Similarly, where switching charges of connecting carriers are absorbed subject to provisions that the resultant line-haul revenue shall not be less than a stated minimum, such minimum should be increased 10 per cent.

Some Rates Too Low.

Our authorization does not extend to increases in the proportions of joint through rates to or from points in foreign countries accruing in such foreign countries. The proportions of such rates accruing within the United States may, however, be increased to the extent authorized herein for rates within the United States.

The applicants have throughout the record indicated their intention, if granted the general authority sought, to proceed with diligence to make the necessary readjustments which commercial and traffic conditions may require, while at the same time resisting any efforts to fritter away the increases by improvident reductions for casual or competitive purposes, or because of the pressure of shippers who wield the threat of diversion of traffic. It is not now practicable to attempt the adjustment of all the rates on individual commodities. We expect that by co-operative action between the shippers and the applicants prompt and effective action may be reached to bring about necessary readjustments; if these efforts fail, and it is believed that violations of law may exist, we will endeavor to give prompt attention to complaints lodged with us respecting any of the increased rates.

It may be possible by co-operative action between the carriers and the shippers to devise a system of statement of maximum increases, or of flat amounts, which will accomplish the purpose of effecting the increases authorized while giving credit for rate increases already accomplished as above described. We will cooperate in working out the details of such an arrangement if desired.

There are many rates which are below maximum levels found reasonable by us. Our findings and authorization do not preclude the applicants from publishing and filing increases upon such rates, in the manner provided by law, subject to possible protest and suspension thereof. It is not the intention that anything in our conclusions shall require the reduction of rates now lawfully in effect.

The foregoing conclusions are without prejudice to the disposition of any proceeding which may be pending before us at any stage, and are without prejudice to the right of the commission hereafter, either upon complaint or investigation on its own motion, to inquire into and determine the lawfulness of any rate or charge now existing or under attack, or which may be increased under this authorization. It is further understood that this proceeding being brought upon the request of the applicant carriers and the increases authorized not being required by us, the principle announced in Arizona Grocery Co. vs. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 284 U. S. 370, will not be applicable to such increased rates; and this understanding has been formally confirmed by the carriers in the record.

Appropriate orders will be entered.

Restraining Order Is Sought Against D. C. Privilege Tax

Striking at the District's business privilege tax from a new angle, the Merchants Candy & Tobacco Co., of 426 Twelfth street southwest, yesterday in District Court launched an attack on the constitutionality of the levy and sought a restraining order to prevent its enforcement.

The firm, through Attorney Morris D. Schwartz, asserted in its petition that it had paid an installment of $2,833.64 of a total tax (estimated) of $6,014.09. The tax was paid to the District under protest and its return was sought, the protest having saved the right to retain a refund in the event the tax was held unlawful.

The petition alleged the tax was "unequal, oppressive and discriminatory" and violated the Constitution in that it deprived the company of its property without due process of law.

Other suits leveled at the tax have been lost because the courts have held that the taxpayer ought to pay the tax under protest and then seek recourse to the courts.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Broad Scope of Amusement Marks Film's Action; Zorina Is Surprise; Trans-Lux Year Old; Notes of the Theater World.

IN HIS production of "The Goldwyn Follies," Samuel Goldwyn has largely made good many of the opulent things he set down on paper in a two-installment article bearing the title of "The Making of Great Entertainment," to which reference was made in this space as long ago as last January.

"The Goldwyn Follies" is a magnificently artistic Technicolor production into which have been poured the richest resources of one of the deans of Hollywood producers. The cast is all-star in every department; some of the scenes partake of a quality of shimmering beauty that the screen seldom, if ever, before has reflected; the story by Ben Hecht ranges through the full range of amusement activity, from low comedy to romance, grand opera to limpid Venetian canals, tap-dancing to classic ballet. There is so much to contemplate in this prodigious spectacle that the subtle humor of its basic story is apt to be overlooked in the recurrent outburst of its stellar "specialties."

BELL.

In fashioning the serio-comic structure of this cleverly articulated framework upon which to hang all of the individualized performances, the satiric Mr. Hecht has taken many sly pokes at the foibles of the Hollywood film plants. His central character is Merlin, a mogul among the producers, who accepts as "colossal" and "terrific" all of the stereotyped and overstressed forms of theatrical exaggeration that have been accepted for years as the solid dramatic rock upon which the eminence of the cinema has been founded.

Then he encounters a demure young woman who explodes his very pet idea on the ground that it is silly, unconvincing and not at all like life. It is upon this premise that "The Goldwyn Follies" builds itself—the laughing off the screen of its usual extravagances and their replacement by the simple things of life that will appeal to 200,000,000 people.

I am not too sure that the operatic, ballet and romantic sequences always adhere quite to their purposes of being "down to earth," but there is no doubt that Mr. Goldwyn here has hit upon a combination of extremes in entertainment that never before has been approximated in magnitude or scope. And, as he said in the articles already mentioned, it is a "class" production. By that is not meant a high-brow effort, aimed only at the intelligentsia, but a work in which "class," in the slang sense, sticks out all over the place.

This, of course, is not intended to be a review of the picture, but merely the first reactions to its expansiveness and beauty, recorded only a few hours after yesterday afternoon's preview screening in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange.

If, in anticipation of a more detailed review after the picture has opened at Loew's Palace on Friday, any earnest is needed as to the excellence of the individual performance revealed in "The Goldwyn Follies," it ought only to be necessary to offer the reminder that the huge cast is led by Adolphe Menjou, The Ritz Brothers, Zorina, Kenny Baker, Andrea Leeds, Helen Jepson, of the Metropolitan Opera; Phil Baker, Ella Logan, Bobby Clark, Jerome Cowan, Nydia Westman, Charles Kullman, Frank Shields, the American Ballet of the Metropolitan Opera, Edgar Bergen and "Charlie McCarthy"—and the gorgeous "Goldwyn Girls."

* * * *

The big surprise of "The Goldwyn Follies" to this corner was Zorina, ballet dancer and actress. Zorina, it will be recalled, was one of the visitors to Washington on the occasion of the President's birthday celebration. I happened to be much in her company at that time and found her to be a shy, reticent, rather frightened sort of girl. She is anything but that in the picture. She comes to life as a fiery dancer, a languorous and alluring siren and a spitfire on the set where she is supposed to be the star in the making of a picture. A more complete metamorphosis I have never seen. I discounted everything Sam Goldwyn had had to say about Zorina after I had met her. Now I charge him with understatement!

* * * *

It hardly seems possible, but apparently it is true.

The Trans-Lux Theater will be one year old on Friday of this week, March 11. Thrown open to the press at a preview performance of its first bill and then brilliantly launched as a public institution of unique entertainment, under the auspices of the Newspaper Women's Club, the Trans-Lux has compiled an extraordinary record of success in a sphere of amusement of which the feasibility in Washington was doubted by many. It has, I believe, never had a losing week. That is something few theaters of whatever kind can boast.

On the other hand, it has achieved some seemingly impossible attendance records, the limited seating capacity of the house being taken into consideration. For example, 28,000 interested spectators crowded the theater the week the pictures showing the destruction of the giant Zeppelin Hindburg were presented; the largest single day's attendance was on Saturday, March 13—and note that hoodoo date—when approximately 6,000 cash customers pushed past the turnstiles.

All of this simmers down to congratulations to Roland Robbins, one of the Capital's veteran theater managers, who has guided the Trans-Lux to its present assured place among Washington's amusement centers.

* * * *

And I will never forget that crazy newsreel that was made to signalize the opening of the Trans-Lux, with all of the drama desks talking out of turn and looking more or less like frightened scarecrows! There is one out of the local five who will never get caught doing that again!

George Murphy Is In Temple Musical

George Murphy, who in the space of two short years has risen to a position of commanding importance in screen musicals, will play the romantic lead opposite Phyllis Brooks in Twentieth Century-Fox's new Shirley Temple musical, "Little Miss Broadway."

Murphy's achievement of the role in "Little Miss Broadway" came as a logical climax to one of the most remarkable careers in pictures.

Noted Star Offers Revelation in Make-up

STEPHEN HAGGARD AND ETHEL BARRYMORE, as they appear in "Whiteoaks," the new play coming to the National for a week's engagement, beginning Monday night. In this vehicle, Miss Barrymore, who earlier in the season was radiantly lovely in "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," appears as a 101-year-old matriarch—as pictured above. This is the role played in the picture "Jalna" by Jessie Ralph. Miss Barrymore seems to have the better of it in the simulation of extreme old age.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 8.—Now that the skies have cleared and we're back on sun-kissed schedule again, we'll try to laugh off this devastating downpour, which we'd like to refer to as a "Scotch mist."

HEDDA HOPPER.

The tragic loss of life and property will be mourned for many months. But it may force our city into preparedness for next year.

It gave Florida the biggest laugh of the year, and we got a few, too. I started out for the Metro studio, not realizing the extent of the storm. After making several detours I came upon a well-known song writer sitting on top of his car crooning "Singing in the Rain," a rival's composition. And did I beat it for home—before my car turned into a boat.

Ordinarily, the Los Angeles River doesn't contain enough water to scoop up in an after-dinner coffee spoon. But during the flood a huge whale came shooting down it with as much speed as though going over Niagara Falls. The whale was built at Warner Brothers' for a picture called "Public Wedding." And in the mouth of the prop whale my son Bill and Jane Wyman were married. It had been moored on the back lot until the rains came. Speaking of whales, one of those mammals came to warn us a few weeks ago when a real one was sighted spouting of Malibu Beach.

Leroy Prinz, who puts dancers through dizzy paces, came out on his front porch to discover that during the night he had been favored with landslides on two sides of his house. And no way to get his car. The fire department rescued him and delivered him to Paramount.

Ralph Bellamy's house in the Riverside Drive section did a Noah's Ark down the river while Ralph was visiting with Director Harry Lachman.

Two Spanish beauties started out in a Model T Ford with grandpa for the "Cocoanut Grove" set at Paramount. All went well until they reached Bronson avenue, which looked like the Mississippi. The street was literally choked with large expensive cars stalled in the water. The old Model T, not wishing to be superior, stopped, too. Grandpa, not a mite disturbed, with plenty of web-foot-work, got her going again. Then, leaning out of the window of his truck, he triumphantly yelled, "Cowards!"—and sailed away.

Franchot Tone, strained, spied a high delivery wagon wading through the torrent. He caught up with it and asked for a lift. "Sure," said the driver, "but I'll have to deliver this bread first."

Adrian, besides creating fashions for our stars, owns and operates an antique shop. The day of the downpour, before his phone service was cut off, he called both his assistants and begged them not to open the shop but to stay home in safety.

". . . All right, dear—take one more look at him . . . Well, don't worry just because the baby likes to rest on his knees. That's a good stunt, for his age . . . What? He might grow up to like resting on his knees? Then it will be very simple. We'll just get him a pair of dice."

12 P. M. "Jed Harris wrote a letter to Mrs. Roosevelt," a reporter confides at the Tavern, in response to her column in which she said that, speaking as an Ordinary Person, 'Our Town' depressed her. Harris wrote: 'I am addressing you as An Ordinary Person.' The letter winds up with: 'Don't forget that Queen Mary never had anything to say about any public venture of any kind.' Jed will advertise a photo of Mrs. Roosevelt, quoting her remarks—and then next to it a photo of Eleanor Holm, in a bathing suit, saying, 'But I liked the show' " . . . At the Cotton Club, Joe Gould brings James J. Braddock to a ringside table, and presents: "I want you to meet another famous James J.—Mrs. James J. Corbett" . . . "The Encyclopeia Brittanica asked me to write a long chapter about the History of Liberty in America, but for $25," Morris Ernst relates at 21. "I asked them 'What others are you getting to write for so little?' They informed: 'Shaw and Kaiser Wilhelm.' "

1 A. M. "Lotte Lehmann, now in Santa Barbara, Calif., phoned her concert-manager in New York, and asked him to call the manager of the Los Angeles auditorium," the opera star's agent reports at the Paradise. "Because of floods, the shortest route to Los Angeles from Santa Barbara was via New York" . . . "The Western Union Co. wrote to me to ask whether I would give them some telegraph gags or stories for use in their company publication," Songwriter Irving Caesar confides at the Gay Nineties. "So I wired them 'This Is the Best Gag I Ever Heard'—and sent it Collect' " . . . "The reason that transatlantic liner sailed an hour later, last week," a jurist assures at Leon & Eddie's. "is because one of the passengers is a noted politician to whom the President wished to speak. The phone-call was put through to Washington all right—but the President was taking a bath at the time."

2 A. M. "Beatrice Lillie sails for London March 30, to appear in the new Cochran show," a producer advises at the Cocoanut Grove. "E. Duryea Dowling will stage it. He sails March 24" . . . "The new Guild play, 'Henry Hogg,' will be a political satire," an official states at the Garbo. "It's about a sign painter who starts running the American Government" . . . "I'm going to India in October," Sally Rand reports at the Casa Manana . . . "Well," Abe Lyman tells her, "you still won't learn the rope-trick" . . . "I start taking dancing lessons tomorrow," Eleanor Holm confides. "I'm going to get a job in a Broadway show. I'll show Billy I can do things." She turns to Billy Rose, and asks: "When may I start swimming again? . . . "When?" Rose decrees. "When the floods come here!"

3 A. M. "Look at the pockets of this overcoat," a cloakroom attendant exhibits at the International Casino. "The pockets are sewn up. The Boys are afraid Dewey might want to plant some evidence" . . . "Mrs. George S. Kaufman had a helluva time getting out of Mexico," one of her friends whispers at the Onyx Club. "She drove to Mexico City in her car, and then sold the auto there. When she tried to leave the country, Mrs. Kaufman was stopped. They insisted that she must leave the country with whatever possessions she brought in" . . . "So I went to Miami, and at Hiaeah I was introduced to a nice elderly man," G. Orson Welles laments at the Stork Club. "After he had left, I finally caught his name. He was George Ade—the man after whom I was named" . . . "Alexander Woollcott is writing a new book," a publisher declares at the Versailes. "It will be called 'The Theater I Knew.' "

4 A. M. "When I saw Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt backstage at 'one-third of a nation,' " Ethel Aaron, manager of that show, reports at the Chateau Moderne, "I told her that the stairs, balustrades, etc., came from some demolished Williamsburg slums. 'Oh,' she answered, 'no wonder it looked familiar' " . . . "Hanns Eisler, the exiled German composer, received a note from Ernest Hemingway asking him to write the music for his new play," an agent reports at Bertolotti's. "Eisler couldn't find any spot where music would fit. Hemingway told him about some phonograph recordings of 'Arise,' a song the Loyalists sang in Madrid, and that he wanted that tune if they could get it. Eisler wrote back: 'We can get it. I composed that song' " . . .

5 A. M. "Billy Leeds, the Tin-Plate King, who owns the yacht Moana, met Vincent Astor." Dick Merrill relates at Reuben's, "and said 'My yacht has everything on it that yours has.' So Astor convinced him he was wrong—by taking Leeds to his Nourmahal—and showing him a coffin" . . . "Arturo Toscanini, during a rehearsal, sung his baton and broke the watch presented him by the N. Y. Philharmonic," an N. B. C. executive states at Lindy's. "The maestro became very angry, threw the watch on the floor, stamped on it and smashed it into hundreds of pieces. John Royal quietly gathered the pieces, and two days later delivered the same watch, completely repaired, back to Toscanini. In the same package were two Ingersoll watches inscribed: 'For Rehearsals Only.' "

Hoover Talks With Hitler and His Chief Aides

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 8.—Herbert Hoover had a 45-minute chat today with Chancellor Hitler.

The former President of the United States had no comment to make after his meeting with Hitler at the Reich chancellery.

Chancellery officials said the two statesmen talked of national problems, German-American relations and "just about everything."

The conversation was in the presence of Hugh R. Wilson, the United States Ambassador, and an interpreter, Paul Schmidt.

Afterward, Hoover attended a luncheon given by Wilson. He sat between Konstantin von Neurath, president of the German Council on Foreign Affairs, and the French Ambassador.

They were flanked by the British and Polish Ambassadors.

As coffee was served in an adjoining room, Mr. Hoover talked successively with Dr. Hjalmer Schacht, president of the Reichsbank; Count Lutz Schwerin von Krosig, minister of finance; Dr. Otto Meissner and Count Weiszaeker.

Every free moment in the forenoon and afternoon was occupied with individual talks with Germans and Americans with whom the former President is acquainted.

At a banquet tonight, Schacht paid tribute to Hoover as "a protagonist of the conscience, humanitarianism and international understanding."

At the same time Schacht said there was "a certain tragic element that a man who had the noblest ideals in humanitarian thoughts, through mistakes and the consequences of post-war times, could not bring those ideals to success."

He expressed the conviction "much is yet to be expected" from Hoover.

Opera Troupe Presents Opus Of Saint-Saens

Chicago Company Wins Plaudits of Rialto Audience.

Contributing another notable performance to the Capital's brief operatic "season," the Chicago Opera Company last night presented "Samson and Dalila" to an appreciative audience in the Rialto Theater.

Adapted from the familiar Biblical story, this composition of Charles Camille Saint-Saens reveals a change of mood to tax the ability of the most expert troupe.

If the first act, with its emphasis on formal choruses, did not find the Chicago singers entirely inspired, they more than redeemed the performance with their brilliant interpretation of the dramatic scenes outside Dalila's home and in the temple.

Hilda Costa, in the role of Dalila, drew an enthusiastic ovation from the audience with her magnificent rendition of the famous aria, "Mon Coeur s'ouvre a to Voix," high point of the second act in which the Philistine temptress shares the stage with Samson and the High Priest.

Pasquale Ferrara sang Samson with appropriate vigor, while Nino Carboni, in the role of the Old Hebrew, and Rocco Pandiscio, as the High Priest, deserve high praise.

The ballet numbers were capably executed by the Marion Chace Dancers.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Efrem Kurtz conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in a joint performance with Col. W. de Basil's Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: "Les Cent Baisers" (choreography by Bronislava Nizhinska, music by Baron Frederic d'Erlanger), "Symphonie Fantastique" (choreography by Lenoid Miassin, music by Hector Berlioz), "L'Apres-midi d'un Faune" (choreography after Vaslav Nizhinski, music by Claude Achille Debussy), "Cimarosiana" (choreography by Leonid Miassin, music by Domenico Cimarosa).

Willingly overlooking the absence of scenic sets made necessary by the limitations of the stage in Constitution Hall, a large assemblage of music lovers and balletomanes enjoyed last evening the unusual opportunity of simultaneously hearing the National Symphony Orchestra and witnessing the colorful and skilled evolutions of the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo. While the combination had proved a happy one last season, that experience was only a preparation for the still more successful collaboration of the two organizations on this occasion.

The program was well balanced between the formal ballet with its features of divertisement and the interpretative ballet which seeks to visualize the associations inherent in "program" music. A fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen formed the basis for the first ballet, "Les Cent Baisers," in which Bronislava Nizhinska's choreography made plain the pantomimed fate of a capricious princess who lost true love in her pursuit of material splendor. Irina Baronova and David Lichin were the principals in the display of technical expertness which is the foundation of whatever story the traditional ballet borrows, and they were ably seconded by Roman Jasinski, Yura Lazovski and Sergei Ismailov in the minor roles.

The companion piece to "The Hundred Kisses" came at the close in the divertissement ballet, "Cimorosiana," in which the costumes and the dances revived the decorative fantasy of the old Comedie dell'Arte. A carnival spirit enlivened the varied dances which were appropriately accompanied by music of Domenico Cimarosa, and the costumes were those of the masked ball as far as the dancing specialists were concerned. The chronological verisimiltude was sustained by the cords de ballet garbed in modified military costume of the Directoire.

Berlioz' "Symphonic Fantastique," repeated from last season, improved upon acquaintance, while Yurek Shabelevski very capably took the role of the dreaming musician formerly danced by Leonid Miassin. Irina Baronova was again the incomparable impersonator of the fair woman who haunts the hallucinatory visions of the despairing lover. Her transformation from the virginal aloofness of the opening scenes to the Maenadic fury of the Witches' Sabbath was a feat of artistic characterization.

In the case of so unabashed a programmatic symphony as this, in which the composer has not only indicated but also underscored his meaning, the validity of a ballet version is scarcely debatable. The one objection that can be raised, save by the entrenched conservatives, is that the action of the ballet inevitably distracts one's attention from the music. But since the composer intended to tell a story, the music, absorbed unconsciously, becomes the more emotionally vivid when the eyes lend their aid.

The same cannot be said for the famous choreographic poem which Vaslav Nizhinski imposed upon Debussy's "Prelude a l'Apres-midi d'un Faune." Interesting as the ballet is with its stylized miming patterned after the profile presentation of Greek graphic art, it has no relation to the music whatsoever. In the first place, Debussy composed the piece as a prelude to Stephane Mallarme's poem and not as a musical interpretation of it. Both the poem and the music appeal not to the visual imagination, but to the intellectual borderland between reason and fantasy.

SHE RISKS HER LIFE FOR THE Movies

IONE REED, Hollywood's daring movie stunt girl, was "on location." A hazardous stunt was filmed over and over before the "take" was right. Later, during a moment of rest, she asked for a Camel. And that led to the question: "I've noticed that you're a steady Camel smoker, Miss Reed. Do you have definite reasons for preferring them to other cigarettes?"

HERE'S MISS REED'S ANSWER: "I certainly have. Camels are different in so many ways. Going through my stunts over and over is a severe test of healthy nerves. There have been times when it would have been disastrous if my nerves had snapped. So you can see why I think there's no other cigarette like Camels, since they are the cigarette that doesn't jangle my nerves. Camels are so mild. I smoke them all through the day, and my nerves don't feel the least bit frayed. They are gentle to my throat too. After a meal, I enjoy Camels—'for digestion's sake.' You see...in so many ways, Camels agree with me."

MISS REED—leaping from a speeding car to a locomotive. "I know what hard work is," she says. "Many a time I've been thankful for that cheery 'lift' I get with a Camel." Often Ione has time for only a quick snack. "Smoking Camels," she says, "always helps me to enjoy my meals so much more."

JUMPING OFF TRAINS—changing from car to train—Ione Reed faces danger with a smile. She knows what she's doing. She is careful in her choice of a cigarette. As she says: "It means a lot to know my cigarette agrees with me!"

Millions of other people find...just as Miss Reed does...that Camels give them what they want in smoking!

IT'S Camels for Hollywood's star stunt girl—Ione Reed! It's Camels for the famous diving expert—Commander Ellsberg! And for golf champion Ralph Guldahl; speed flier Roscoe Turner; and men and women in all walks of life. They find that Camels are supremely the cigarette that agrees with them. If you are not now enjoying Camels, perhaps you, too, will find that it means a lot to smoke Camels—the cigarette that is made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS, Turkish and Domestic.

FOR HER HOURS OF RECREATION Miss Reed likes cooking...dancing...outdoor sports. And Camels! Referring to Camel's popularity, "Hollywood seems to have a decided preference for Camels," she says. "On almost every movie lot I notice that so many of the stars prefer Camels."

"What cigarette do the tobacco growers smoke themselves?"

"Camels—by a large majority," say planters who know the kinds of tobacco bought by each popular cigarette

T. N. Williams, well-known grower, of Winchester, Kentucky, says: "A planter knows tobacco. My last crop was the best I ever had and the Camel people bought my best leaf tobacco. There isn't any question where the more expensive tobaccos go. They're in Camel cigarettes. That's one reason why I, and most of the planters around here, smoke Camels."

Top prices, that's what J. B. Jackson, successful planter, got from the Camel buyer last year. "Camel doesn't buy just any tobacco—they pay more to get the best tobacco. That means finer tobaccos are used for Camels. That's why I smoke Camels."

"I'm a tobacco planter," says Vertner Hatton, who has grown tobacco for 25 years. "The Camel people bought the best lots of my last crop. I smoke Camels—because I know there isn't any substitute for more expensive tobaccos. Most planters favor Camels."

"It's a fact that Camel uses costlier tobaccos," adds Floyd Smither, who grows tobacco and knows it from the ground up. "Last year I grew a handsome crop and the Camel people bought up all the choice lots. I smoke Camels myself. So do most planters hereabouts."

"I had the dandiest tobacco crop ever last season," says Roy Jones. "The Camel people outbid the other buyers to get the best lots. I've seen that happen year after year at the auctions. So I know they use costlier tobaccos for Camels, and I smoke 'em."

D.C. Income Tax Of 1 to 10% Put In Revenue Bill

District

For corporations the tax is 4 per cent on the first $15,000 of net income, 5 per cent on the next $35,000 and 6 per cent on all income in excess of $50,000.

The tax will apply to nonresidents insofar as their income is earned in the District, but credits will be allowed for income taxes paid to the States.

The motor vehicle weight tax on auto trailers was modified so as to ease the levy on light vehicles. Whereas the present law stipulates a minimum tax of $15, the new provision begins with a levy of $5 on trailers weighing less than 500 pounds, provides $10 for vehicles weighing between 500 and 1,250 pounds, $15 for trailers between 1,250 and 2,000 pounds, and follows the present motor vehicle weight tax set on all trailers heavier than 2,000 ponds.

Estimates furnished the sub-committee by District officials fixed the additional return from an increase of 50 cents in the whisky tax at $1,126,000.

The revenue from the levy on beer, which now pays no tax, can only be guessed because of the widely different figures submitted by brewers and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal as to the amount of beer sold in Washington.

Realty Tax Not Fixed.

The brewers told Chairman Nichols that 450,000 barrels are sold in the Capital annually. Seal estimated 260,000. Nichols said that if a compromise figure is adopted the tax increase on whiskey and the beer levy will raise $1,500,000 together.

Nichols said he does not believe the $1 tax high enough, and he added that he may offer an amendment on the House floor to raise it to $2 a barrel.

While the real estate tax rate has not yet been fixed in the bill, Nichols reiterated the opinion that $1.60 will be ample together with the income tax and the beer and liquor levies.

Anticipating a net return of $2,000,000 from the income tax, he pointed out, and $1,500,000 from beer and liquor, a $1.60 realty rate would produce an additional $1,250,000. Thus all three would produce $4,750,000 or the present estimate of the District deficit based on the Senate version of the local appropriations bill of $48,000,000.

If this deficit is reduced in conference, as appears likely, the estimated return from the tax bill will be in excess of the expected deficit.

Percentage Plan Dropped.

"We are confronted with the alternative, it seems, of double taxation or the failure to raise revenue needed for the next fiscal year," Nichols said.

The sub-committee will meet again on Monday to pass on other details of the income tax and other provisions of the bill.

The sub-committee, before adopting the graduated scale of income tax rates, rejected as impractical the percentage plan proposed by the Citizens' Committee on Fair Taxation. This committee suggested the District tax be one-sixth of the Federal payments of District residents and nonresidents doing business here.

Primary exemptions under the District tax, as approved, are the same as in the Federal law, viz., $1,000 for single persons, $2,500 for married couples and $400 for each dependent under 18 years of age.

The scale of rates on net income, or the amount earned in excess of these exemptions, for individuals, is as follows:

One per cent on the first $2,000; 2 per cent on the next $3,000; 3 per cent on the next $5,000; 4 per cent on the next $5,000; 5 per cent on the next $5,000; 6 per cent on the next $5,000; 7 per cent on the next $5,000; 8 per cent on the next $10,000; 9 per cent on the next $10,000, and 10 per cent on all income in excess of $50,000.

Mrs. Thomas Boyle, chairman of the citizens' committee on fair taxation, informed of the House subcommittee action, said her organization was "gratified that its efforts have resulted in a progressive, graduated tax instead of either a sales tax or a flat income tax." She said, however, her committee would continue to press for a tax based on Federal income payments.

5% Increase in Freight Rates Given to Railroads by ICC

Rail

the commission's action can be found if these figures are contrasted with the claim of the railroads made before the I. C. C. that they needed $614,000,000 additional revenue. The rate increases they proposed, the equivalent of about 12.5 per cent of the rate structure, would produce $469,000,000, it was estimated.

Immediately after the ICC handed down its freight rate decision—it deferred action on the carriers' petition for an increase in Eastern passenger rates—President Roosevelt said he would call for next week his previously announced conference on the entire railroad problem. The purpose of this conference is to initiate steps for working out a long-range railroad program.

The ICC members generally indicated they did not regard increased freight rates as a solution for the depressed condition of American railroads. More drastic and fundamental action in the way of eliminating duplicating facilities and reorganization of the financial setups of many carriers was held to be urgently needed by several members of the commission.

Mahaffie Dissents.

Although Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie was the only outright dissenter to the commission's decision, several other commissioners indicated a belief that greater rate increases should have been allowed the railroads. Mahaffie asserted that he could not "concur in the extent to which limitations are placed upon the increases sought, nor in the exclusion of commodities moving in heavy volume from any increases.

"In my opinion, the increases authorized will not permit, under existing circumstances, the adequate transportation system contemplated by the law," Mahaffie asserted, adding that the "meager increases authorized" do not afford the railroads a chance to "earn their living."

Commissioner Carroll, while concurring in the decision, asserted he did so "because it allows increases in rates, but I believe that those increases are inadequate." Applied to the majority of items, the increases, he said, "neither afford the measure of relief sought nor that to which I think the carriers are entitled."

Urges Consolidation.

He also thought the commission should have included in its decision an expression of an intention to deal in the near future with the railroad problem in a more far-reaching manner. He reiterated his proposal of last summer for consolidation of all the railroads into one national system as a "logical cure for the ills of the industry."

Commissioner Frank McManamy, reiterating his previous dissents to past I. C. C. rate decisions as inadequate, asserted that "the railroads cannot operate on advice or admonitions, no matter how wise or how generously provided, particularly when Congresional action, large expenditures and a period of years will be required to make them effective."

"If the railroads are to continue to function and to maintain their plant, to say nothing of modernizing it to provide the quantity and quality of transportation to which the public is entitled, they must have relief of a more substantial character."

Chairman Walter M. W. Splawn, in a concurring statement, was authority for the assertion that "substantially what the majority accomplish in this report is to give the railroads an increase of approximately 5 per cent on all rates in effect after decision in Ex Parte 115 (in which slight rate increases on specified commodities were allowed last spring)." Splawn agreed with the finding that the 15 per cent increase plea should be rejected, that the maximum increases should not exceed 10 per cent, and that a number of commodities should not be subjected to an increase in rates of more than 5 per cent.

Substantially 5 Per Cent.

"I do not agree that the increases of maximum rates should be uniformly either 5 per cent or 10 per cent," he asserted. "Some graduation seems required by the record."

The majority of the commission, however, swept aside all these objections. They concluded that present railroad revenues are "inadequate, whether the simple common law tests be applied, or if they be judged by the statute with reference to their sufficiency, under honest, economical and efficient management, to provide in the public interest adequate and efficient railway transportation service at the lowest cost consistent with furnishing such service."

But the majority likewise felt, as expressed in their conclusions (printed in full elsewhere in The Post today), that an increase of 15 per cent based on a normal volume of traffic "is for a larger amount than is reasonably necessary to meet the purposes of the increase, if realizable, and will be such a deterrent to traffic as to stifle movement."

This thought—namely, that too much of an increase in rates would hurt the railroads instead of helping them—appeared to dominate the considerations which caused the majority of the commission to reject the 15 per cent plea. Nor did the majority concede that a horizontal increase of 15 per cent would be "just and reasonable."

The majority explained its refusal to permit any increase in rates for bituminous coal, lignite, coke and iron ore on the ground that these commodities "justly and reasonably should bear no further increases than those already imposed" by recent actions of the I. C. C.

The commission last October authorized on bituminous coal and coke an increase of 3 cents per net ton in rates of 75 cents or less, 5 cents per ton in rates from 76 cents to $1, and 10 cents in rates over $1, and in the case of rates within and to Western territory an increase of 15 cents per ton in rates over $2. No increased rates were allowed last year on anthracite coal.

Plight Conceded.

The majority, in discussing the merits of the proposed increased rates for coal, pointed out the contentions of protestants against this part of the railroad plea that the carriers which would chiefly benefit from such a boost in rates are of "outstanding financial strength and others which have not been shown to be in pressing need." The commission also called attention in this regard to the fact that the railroads in Pocahontas region had a return on the value of their property last year of 9.039 per cent, compared with a return ranging from 1.708 per cent to 4.721 per cent for railroads in other regions and compared to an average return for last year of 2.955 per cent for the entire country.

The commission, however, conceded that there are many railroads in difficult financial situations to which coal is highly important and that their need for more revenue is unquestionable. The commission pointed out that, though suggested by it last year, the railroads have not come forward with a proposal for pooling or other rearrangement of revenues which would prevent accrual of undue increases to prosperous roads, while help is given to those carriers in need.

The refusal of the I. C. C. to authorize any further increase in soft coal, coke and iron ore rates particularly disappointed many railroads because these commodities constitutes a substantial part of their freight volume.

In restricting to 5 per cent the rate increases on agricultural products, other tropical fruits, and animals and products thereof, except horses and mules, the commission avowedly leaned heavily on the objections raised by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and his experts. The commission said it accepted "their testimony as high authority." The majority devoted a number of pages of its report summarizing the contentions of Wallace and its assistants, with an emphasis on the depressed condition of agriculture.

Increased freight rates on agricultural products, the I. C. C. stated, cannot be passed on to consumers, but "would of necessity lower the farm prices of agricultural products." The agency also pointed out that the prospects for increasing export of farm products depends on keeping the prices down.

1921 Reaction Recalled.

"From the analysis made of the effect of increases in rates upon the volume of traffic, offered, the deduction is made by the Secretary of Agriculture that a part of the anticipated increase in freight revenue of the railroads is likely to be offset in a loss in the volume of their traffic, similar to that they experienced in the depression in 1921 following the 1920 general increase and in the period of 1929-32 when railroad rates remained relatively inflexible as compared with the varying prices of both agricultural and industrial products," the ICC majority pointed out.

In discussing freight rates on lumber and forest products, the report pointed out the need for reviving housing construction, asserting that the increase in freight rates proposed by the railroads would average 4.5 cents per 100 pounds or a direct increase for the average small house of $17.55 "which would be inflated to $26.32 by an unexplained '50 per cent distributors' mark-up."

Commenting on contentions that this increased cost would represent only slightly more than one-half of one per cent of a $5,000 house, the ICC majority asserted that "in this aspect the effect of the proposed increase upon the success of the move for better housing seems trivial, but it is fallacious to look merely to the increase in transportation cost from the mill to the place of utilization."

House Passes $75,000 Salary Publicity Bill

Tax

York, led a group of Republicans in support of the publicity movement. He cited payment to nine officials of one corporation of salaries in excess of $300,000, and instances where workers were laid off, but official salaries increased.

Fuller Plan Carries.

"That type of thing is doing much to promote Socialism and Communism in this country," declared the New Yorker. He urged Democrats to offer an amendment providing publicity of all salaries over $100,000.

Success of the publicity drive came with an amendment Rerepresentative Claude A. Fuller, of Arkansas, a Democratic member of the Ways and Means Committee, starting publication of salaries at $75,000. This was amended by Representative Frank H. Buck (Democrat), of California, to require publication by the Treasury Department, instead of the Ways and Means Committee.

Lamneck Cites Revenues.

Opposition to salary publicity brought from Representative Arthur P. Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, the comment that "they talk a lot about high salaries, but they say nothing of how much the Government takes in taxes."

Lamneck said Alfred P. Sloan, jr., of General Motors, received $561,000 in salary last year, but had to pay $405,000 of it back in Federal and State taxes. Boileau challenged the statement. He said if Sloan paid that much tax, "it must have been on other income."

Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, charged that if the publicity requirement is raised to $75,000 "and present conditions continue, there will be no one in the country but the President having a salary over that."

Before recess, the House was on the brink of a pitched controversy over Ways and Means Committee proposals to levy a penalty surtax on wealthy corporations of the family type, controlled by ten or less persons. This is the most sharply contested provision of the House bill, and Speaker Bankhead predicted yesterday the vote will be "close."

Modifications Approved.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, leading opponent of the penalty, offered his amendment at the last minute to strike out the special tax and tighten section 102 of the present law, penalizing improper accumulation of corporate surplus. At that point, House leaders shut off the day's work. The McCormack amendment will be the first order of business today.

As the recess was taken, the House had passed over and tentatively approved without change the two pivotal provisions of the bill, providing modifications in both the undivided profits tax of 1936 and the capital gains levy.

On Monday the House had tentatively approved a 12½ to 16 per cent tax on corporations earning less than $25,000, with complete exemption from the undivided profits levy. Corporations earning more than $25,000 would be subject to a graduated undivided profits tax of from 16 to 20 per cent, depending on dividends withheld from distribution.

Smoother Step-down.

Yesterday preliminary approval was given provisions for a smoother step-down in capital gains levies, with maximum relief provided on property held five years, instead of ten. Maximum rates of 16 to 39.2 per cent would be provided on gains realized on assets retained for more than 13 months. An alternative tax method is provided whereby the taxpayer could treat his net long-term capital gain separately for tax purposes, subject to a 40 per cent levy, if the tax computed by this method were lower.

Nearly a score of amendments opposed by the Ways and Means Committee were defeated or ruled out on points of order yesterday. They included the following:

By Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, to permit reciprocal taxation by Federal and State governments, of official salaries and interest on securities of the other.

By Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, to permit additional tax reduction on corporate earnings set aside for payment of old debts.

By McFarlane, to return to the 1936 undivided profits tax and normal rates on large corporations.

By Representative Wearin (Democrat), of Iowa, to eliminate the proposed "alternate method" of computing capital gains taxes, and require taxation under income tax rates.

By Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, to levy only a 12½ per cent flat tax on capital gains.

By Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, to exempt money used for plant expansion or debt retirement from the undivided profits tax.

Norris Discusses Case.

Chairman Morgan did not reply, said the President, but visited the White House where he told the President he had not intended in the article to impugn the motives of the other directors. The President said he told Morgan not to do it again and to endeavor to work in harmony with Lilenthal and Harcourt Morgan.

The President said he received two telegrams yesterday which illusirated the need for facts in the situation. One, he said, came from New Jersey, and declared, "You must vindicate Chairman Morgan." The second, he said, came from Illinois, and said, "You must vindicate the majority and not the power interests."

Earlier the Senate had listened tensely for a solid hour and a half to an address by Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, father of the TVA.

Norris declared that he spoke with "some embarrassment" for two reasons—that part of the matters concerning TVA which he was forced to discuss, were still in process of litigation, and that he had felt "deep affection" for Chairman Morgan.

Jealousy Condemned.

Then the silver-haired liberal slashed Chairman Morgan with whip-like strokes of criticism, describing the chairman as "moved by intense jealousy of his associates—a jealousy that has led him beyond the reach of reason."

Norris said: "When the green-eyed monster gets possession of the human heart, it is only a question of time before it will get control of the human intellect."

He pictured Morgan as increasingly jealous of Lilienthal's popularity in the Tennessee Valley region, and charged that Morgan, in more than a year's repeated criticisms of Lilienthal, "never specified any concrete things, any definite facts that in my judgment were valid. His violence continued to increase. He used language, epithets which I will not repeat."

He recalled Morgan's threat to resign if Lilienthal were reappointed and said he had himself "labored with Chairman Morgan to keep him from resigning, telling him that this great undertaking of the TVA was larger than any one man." Then he added dryly:

"After a while, despairing of the hopeless task, I began to think it would be a good thing if he did resign.

"Then I frankly hoped he would resign. Then gradually it dawned on me that he wouldn't resign."

The TVA, in a statement issued at Knoxville, Tenn., slapped at reports alleging irregular expenditure of about $5,000,000 with the counter-charge that the Comptroller General's office had "flouted" the law in releasing such information before permitting the TVA to account for its expenses.

Bridges Urges Inquiry.

During his address, Norris disclosed a telegram from J. D. Ross, director, Bonneville Dam power project, repudiating "with all possible emphasis" any belief that Ross shares Morgan's "hostility" to policies of the Lilienthal-Harcourt Morgan majority.

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, declared that "TVA has the makings of another Teapot Dome scandal," and urged passage of the King-Bridges resolution for a Congressional investigation of TVA.

Representative Donald R. McLean (Republican), New York, introduced a resolution asking all three TVA directors to resign their posts.

Lilienthal wrote Wendall L. Willkie, president, Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, asking him to confer March 15 at Chattanooga, Tenn., on the TVA's offer to buy private utilities operating in the area.

In New York, Willkie agreed, stating he would furnish data on all private properties if the Public Works Administration would halt grants to municipalities for power projects while negotiations continue. (PWA refused a similar request Monday, charging it was "another obstructive move" by Willkie.)

A special three-judge Federal court here, following recent Supreme Court action, threw out of district court the four remaining private utility suits challenging the right of the Government to advance loans to municipalities for erection of duplicating power facilities or plants.

Removal Power Weighed.

A moot question in Washington yesterday was whether the President is empowered under the TVA act to remove directors or subordinate officials for cause. It was generally believed that he can do so. Congress can also displace the officials by passage of a concurrent resolution.

But the Supreme Court decisions, in the only cases comparable to that which would arise in the event the President sought to force Chairman Morgan to resign, or even should Congress seek to oust him, place doubt, it was believed, on the power of each to enforce such a decision.

In the case of William E. Humphrey, Federal Trade Commissioner, whose removal President Roosevelt sought in 1933, the Supreme Court ruled on May 27, 1935, after Humphrey's death, that:

"We think it plain under the Constitution that illimitable power of removal is not possessed by the President in respect of officers of the character of those just named (members of quasi-legislative or quasi-judicial bodies). The authority of Congress, in creating quasi-legislative or quasi-judicial agencies, to require them to act in discharge of their duties independently of executive control cannot well be doubted; and that authority includes, as an appropriate incident, power to fix the period during which they shall continue in office, and to forbid their removal except for cause in the meantime. For it is quite evident that one who holds his office only during the pleasure of another, cannot be depended upon to maintain an attitude of independence against the latter's will."

Move to Block Dam Seen.

In a previous case, Myers vs. the United States, brought by one Frank S. Myers, a postmaster of Portland, Oreg., who was removed from office by President Wilson, the Supreme Court held that the President is empowered by the Constitution to remove any officer appointed by him with the advice and consent of the Senate, but emphasized that Congress cannot draw to itself the power to remove or the right to participate in the exercise of that power.

The address of Senator Norris yesterday, intense, moving, and keenly pointed, was the highpoint of Congressional developments, as he stressed throughout it his desire to see the TVA investigated, "neither by its enemies nor by its friends," but according to his resolution for a Federal Trade Commission investigation. After blasting Chairman Morgan, he paused to a heated answer to charges that he was trying to "whitewash" the TVA by seeking a closed-door FTC investigation rather than open Congressional inquiry. He then asserted, and was supported by Majority Leader Alben W. Barkey, of Kentucky, that the present flood of publicity results from pressure to block the $2,700,000 appropriation item now in conference between the House and Senate, to begin construction of the important Gilbertsville, Ky., superdam, key to future TVA development, and eventually to cost $112,000,000.

Norris ridiculed the assertion by Chairman Morgan that Lilienthal and Dr. Harcourt Morgan conspired to bilk the public by settling with Senator George Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, in the latter's $5,000,000 claim for supposed damages to "marble" lands owned by Berry and now flooded by TVA dam waters.

Wives' Letters Bring Gaming Raid on 'Club'

22 Held After 6th Police Invasion of I St. Place.

Five men were arrested and 17 more booked for investigation at Police Headquarters yesterday as a result of a police raid on the Printers Literary Club on the third floor of 1306 I street northwest.

According to Capt. George M. Little, chief of the vice squad, the raid was his answer to letters he has received "from hundreds of wives" who have complained their husbands gambled away their wages.

Led by Sergt. George Deyoe, a corps of detectives and marshals arrived at the club early in the afternoon. They said they had to force an entrance through chicken wire which reinforced the door.

Poker Chips Seized.

The 17 patrons who were surprised in the room were taken to headquarters, booked and released to appear later as witnesses.

100 Held in Roundup.

Confiscated equipment included poker chips, cards, racehorse scratch sheets, a card table and other furniture, four bottles of liquor and nine cases of beer. Police also seized $237, some in marked bills. Several pay checks were found with the money.

The club has been raided on five previous occasions, police said.

Among the raiding detectives were William McEwen, Melvin Kite; Samuel Smith and Paul Little. Several representatives of the Federal alcoholic tax unit of the Treasury Department also were present.

Shortly after midnight today the new pick-up squad swooped into a poolroom in the 600 block of T street northwest and arrested 17 men, one of whom, known to police to have been convicted for pocketbook-snatching, was armed with a snapknife. All were held for investigation.

In the wake of a raid staged Monday night, which netted 43 colored men, robbery squad detectives yesterday rounded up 35 more men in beer joints and poolrooms along Seventh street northwest.

Yesterday's catch brought the total to 100 men who are being held for investigation pending a line-up tonight. Nearly 60 holdup victims have been invited to appear at the line-up in an attempt to identify the prisoners as their assailants.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said last night that all of the men seized are "street-corner loafers who haven't worked in months." If they are not identified tonight, some of them will be charged with vagrancy and the others released.

"We intend to lock up every suspicious-looking person on the streets. They have no right standing about idle. They just plot together and commit more crimes," Thompson declared.

Led by Fowler.

The raids yesterday were conducted by Lieut. John H. Fowler and members of the robbery squad. They followed on the heels of the newly organized pickup squad which arrested 43 men in a cafe at Fourth and K streets northwest Monday night.

Meanwhile, Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, said he had summoned three District Court justices and ranking police officials for a conference to develop plans for a war against crime in Washington.

"This is just the first step in my plan to make the Capital one of the hottest spots in the country for criminals," said Schulte, who was recently the victim of an armed holdup near his home.

Announcement of the crime-control conference followed closely the introduction of a bill in which Schulte proposed sentences ranging from life imprisonment to the death penalty for armed robbery.

Invitations to the conference—scheduled for a later date—were sent to District Court Justices Daniel O'Donoghue, Joseph W. Cox and Jesse C. Adkins, Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown and Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives.

"I want to make the Nation's Capital a model for the country," said Schulte.

Record "Appealing."

The District's crime record is appalling, the House was told yesterday by Representative Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, during a debate on whether or not Congress should make public Federal income tax payments. Sauthoff said:

"What are the facts? Milwaukee is the fifteenth city in size in the United States, while it is seventh in commercial importance. Its crime record is the lowest in the United States.

"Now let us look at the District of Columbia. It is a shame and a disgrace to the Congress of the United States. The administration of its affairs is inefficient and cannot stand comparison with other cities.

"It is a paradise for the numbers racket, which flourishes openly in broad daylight. So sure are the racketeers of immunity from prosecution that they ply their nefarious traffic without even an effort at concealing it.

Sammet Killing Unsolved.

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—The gun death of Dr. Max Bernhard Sammet, 44-year-old emigrant from Germany, was placed on the list of unsolved crimes today when a coroner's jury returned a verdict of "murder by person or persons unknown."

Raid on Printers Literary Club Draws Throng of Curious

Workshops, Beauty Parlors Help Reclaim The Mentally Ill Under St. Elizabeths System

Shock

certain individuals are so ill mentally that they must temporarily be considered legally incompetent. There is no essential difference between a mental and a physical illness. Many so-called strictly physical illnesses reveal mental symptoms and many nervous and mental conditions are due in part or entirely to physical causes.

Booklet Still Issued.

"The nervous system is the most delicate part of the body structure and it would, therefore, be entirely unreasonable to expect it to escape an occasional breakdown.

"There are just as many different kinds of mental diseases as physical ones. Some of them are mild while others are more serious. The symptoms and outcome of each mental illness are correspondingly different.

"If a mental illness is recognized early and given prompt medical attention, improvement and recovery can be expected just as frequently as in other illnesses."

The men, women and a small percentage of children who form a steady procession into the treatment center — new admissions average approximately 1,000 a year—still receive the booklet, which has been revised a few times. Only now it is handed to them by the new head, Dr. Winfred Overholser.

They are still given to understand they are ill, not criminals or outcasts. And that no more stigma is attached to their hospitalization than to the man or woman having an appendix removed or a heart condition treated.

By and for them there are beauty parlors and baseball games, movies and circulating library, classes in craftsmanship and tennis. Only the most "disturbed," as the hospital puts it, or those too old and infirm for conventional recreational and occupational activities are confined and even for them some sort of diversion usually can be found.

The majority of the patients are eligible for one kind of occupational therapy or another, whether it be milking cows, making shoes or weaving rugs. All shoes and mattresses are made on the 400-acre reservation. Dresses are designed and fashioned, baskets woven and buildings painted by the sick.

Primping Helps Women.

In every line of endeavor the object is treatment, rather than production. An exception is the beauty parlor. Rather, the beauty parlors, for there are several of them in the various female wards. Their value, says Dr. Overholser, is not only as a labor medium, but still more important, the primping and sprucing up of the women seems to have a markedly beneficial effect on their mental conditions.

"It is astonishing," said the superintendent, "how they perk up with a hair wave, a manicure or shampoo. The service offered is fairly complete, although permanent waves are not given because that operation is rather a delicate one."

He was surprised and gratified at the success of the class in esthetic dancing which was begun since he came to St. Elizabeths. An outside volunteer is in charge of the group, which assembles twice a week. A patient plays the piano.

"There are now about 20 taking lessons," Dr. Overholser said. "The pupils are intensely interested in this novel form of therapy and it is working noticeable improvement."

Everything in the patient's routine is there for its therapeutic value. Walks about the grounds, attendance at band concerts, games, movies, etc., socializing in the wards, visits home—all are encouraged to the extent of the sufferer's capacity to take part.

Early Diagnosis Vital.

Specific treatment is the exception in mental illness. If insulin and metrazol shock live up to expectations, a tremendous short cut toward dementia praecox relief and recovery will have been achieved. Until then the most conspicuous "specific" in mental disease probably will continue to be malaria therapy for paresis.

Paresis, or general paralysis, is the affliction of about 10 per cent of the populations of State institutions. It is the brain involvement of syphilis.

"When I entered this work about 20 years ago paretics were almost hopeless," said Dr. Overholser. "When we got one, we said 'too bad' and did all we could to make life bearable for the patient.

"Now it is different. The case we can't help is the exception. You would be surprised how many not only gain their discharge after a course of malaria treatment, in conjunction with the use of anti-syphilitic drugs, but return to their former jobs—and keep them indefinitely."

Figures show that six of every 10 paretics who take malaria before their mental affliction is a year old recover and resume their places in society. However, the recovery rate drops to 19 per cent if the disease gets a one to three-year start and after three years the chances are 9 to 1 against the patient.

Early diagnosis is vital," the doctors say.

1 Held in Drive On Unlicensed Radio Stations

E Street Man Freed on $200 Bond; Other Amateurs Sought.

A Federal drive against operators of unlicensed amateur radio stations in the District was indicated yesterday, following the arrest of Samuel Alfred Trewolla, first Washingtonian in several years to be charged with using the air waves without Government permit.

Trewolla, who lives at 1210 E street northeast, was released on $200 bond by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. His arrest Monday night developed from investigations of two Federal Communications Commission agents brought to the Capital from Baltimore to track down amateurs illegally operating here. Trewolla denied the charge.

At the FCC it was said that "two or three" additional prosecutions probably would be instituted in the near future on the strength of "considerable information" recently obtained. The number of "hams" broadcasting in the District without license was estimated at "from 10 to 25."

Maximum penalty for unlicensed operation is $10,000 fine, or two years' imprisonment, or both. The extreme sentences have never been given.

Comparatively little trouble has been experienced in Washington until recently, FCC officials declared yesterday. However, conditions at the present time were described as "pretty bad."

Unlicensed amateurs may interfere, it was explained, with high frequencies assigned to police, aviation and television. Pointing out that Government permits are granted only after an examination in radio construction, knowledge of code, etc., FCC officials described illegal operators as those who "either can't, or won't" pass the Federal tests.

'Are You in Love?' Check Your Reply With Lie Detector

By the United Press.

New York, March 8.—Folks who wonder if they really are in love with each other can find out now, William Moulton Marston, inventor of the blood-pressure lie detector, announced tonight and gave a demonstration to prove it.

The subject was Mrs. Smith Christopher (not her real name) and she said she wanted to know why she had a physical breakdown which forced her to give up her job.

Mrs. Christopher, blonde and attractive, said she was divorced and was not in love with her former husband.

"Did you fall in love with someone else before your physical breakdown?" Marston asked.

"No." (The lie detector showed a very sharp rise, from a normal 130 millimeters to 150 millimeters, indicating deception.)

"Are you in love now?"

"I told you 'no,'" Mrs. Christopher answered sharply. (The indicator shot up to 150 millimeters.)

Marston asked if she wanted to marry the man she was in love with. Mrs. Christopher said, "probably yes." The indicator rose to 152.

CIO Puts Kennedy In Muddled Race For Pa. Governor

Harrisburg, Pa., March 8 (AP).—The United Mine Workers Union put Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy into the scrambled race today for the Democratic nomination for Governor—a day ahead of his own statement.

As Kennedy promised an "affirmative" answer to the question of whether he would run, forces of John L. Lewis started circulating nomination petitions in Kennedy's behalf in Luzerne County—his home district.

Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the miners' union, said he would make his announcement in the State capital tomorrow.

Senate Will Honor Robinson Memory

Tribute will be paid the late Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, on April 20 at 2 p. m., when the Senate will suspend business in memory of the Democratic leader.

Unanimously accepting a resolution offered by Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, members of the upper house planned to eulogize the life and public services of the Arkansan, who died last July.

An oil painting of Senator Robinson now in the office of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, will be hung in the Senate corridor on the same day.

Chariot of Roses To Honor Texas Mothers-in-Law

Amarillo, Tex., March 8 (U.P.).—A chariot of roses was built tonight for Mrs. Martha Rogers and tomorrow the 96-year-old woman, oldest mother-in-law in these parts, will ride in state in a parade designed to stamp out the practice of telling jokes about mothers-in-law.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrives tomorrow in the role of the Nation's most famous mother-in-law, bringing with her Elliott, her son, and Mrs. Ruth Googins Roosevelt, her daughter-in-law. Gov. James Allred, with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Claude Miller, and the governors of Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico and Oklahoma will attend. In the parade will be one float so large it will carry 500 mothers-in-law.

"You've got the wrong slant on Joe! He's not rich by a long shot!"

"Then how can he afford such a fine whiskey as Four Roses?"

"Come, come, gentlemen! He found out that Four Roses costs very little more than the whiskey he used to buy!"

"And that's what surprises so many people!"

"THEY'VE heard that Four Roses is just about the finest whiskey ever made, and they naturally think it must cost a pretty penny!

"But it doesn't! The chances are that Four Roses costs only a little, if any, more than the whiskey they've been buying right along.

Manufacturers Use Movie to Defend Cause

Senate Inquiry Group Told Film Sample of Its Service.

A showing of moving pictures, which officials of the National Association of Manufacturers called a "fair sample" of those distributed by its information service, ended yesterday one phase of a Senate investigation of the association.

One film developed the theme that industry could provide many jobs through new inventions and new uses for existing commodities.

The association showed the films as part of a presentation to "explain or counteract" material which had previously gone into the record of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

John C. Gall, counsel for the organization, submitted a statement declaring it was "sheer nonsense" to characterize the attitude of the N. A. M. toward the Wagner labor act as "lawless or unwarranted."

Previously, the investigators put in the record a letter of June 1, 1937, in which Walter B. Weisenburger, executive vice president of the N. A. M., told association members that "the members of the employment relations committee felt very strongly at their meeting last week that a continuous active campaign should be carried on to bring to the country facts about irresponsible labor unions, the closed shop and the check off."

Weisenburger said the campaign was "not against unionism but against union abuses."

Continuing its study of employer associations, the committee announced it would begin hearings tomorrow on the activities of the Johnstown Citizens Committee in the "little steel" strike there last summer.

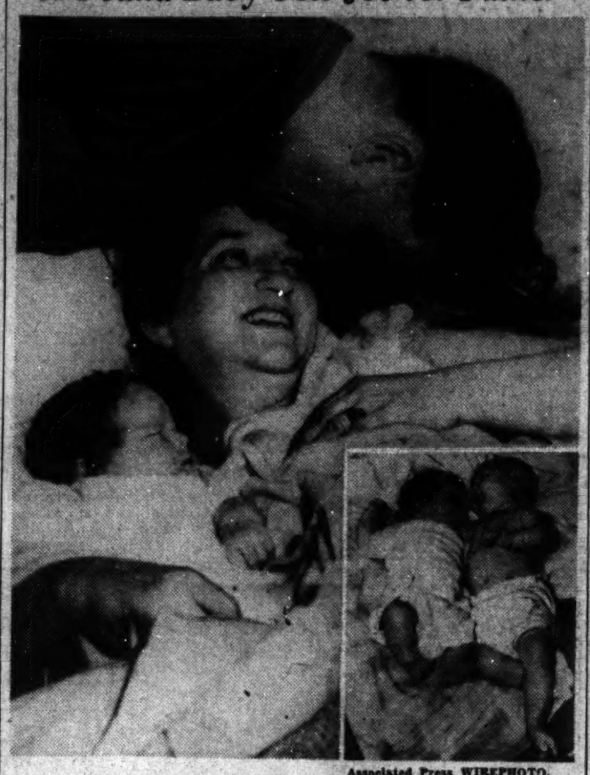
19-Pound Baby Gets Job for Father



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

New Mooney Inquiry.

Assistant Chief of Staff

BRIG. GEN. ROBERT McC. BECK, Jr., who is new assistant chief of staff in charge of operations and training division of the Army general staff.

Brig. Gen. Beck Named Aide to Chief of Staff

Replaces Gen. Tyner as Head of Operations and Training Division.

Brig. Gen. Robert McC. Beck, jr., has been appointed assistant chief of staff in charge of the operations and training division of the General Staff, the War Department announced yesterday. He succeeds Brig. Gen. George P. Tyner who has been transferred to the supply division.

Shortly after the World War Gen. Beck was on duty here as executive officer of the War Plans Division.

He attended the Army School of the Line, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in 1921, and upon his graduation was assigned to duty with the R. O. T. C. at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.

After duty as an instructor at the Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kans., Gen. Beck served as executive officer of Camp Douglas, Wis. He returned to Washington in 1925 and was attached to the office of the chief of cavalry. He graduated from the Army War College the following year and was assigned to duty as an instructor in the General Service Schools, Fort Leavenworth.

Gen. Beck next was ordered to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., as executive officer of the Sixth Cavalry and served in that post until appointed director of the War Plans Division, Army War College, in 1931. Four years later he was ordered to command of the Fourth Cavalry, Fort Meade, S. Dak., and until recently was on duty at Fort Bliss, Tex.

A native of Westminster, Md., Gen. Beck graduated from West Point in 1901 and was commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry.

Before the World War he served at various posts throughout the United States and in the Philippines.

He was overseas from February, 1918, until May, 1919. While in France he participated in the Aisne-Marne, Oise-Aisne and Meuse-Argonne offensives. He returned to the United States with the Thirty-second Division and continued to serve as its chief of staff until he was transferred to Camp Custer, Mich., on May 18, 1919.

Gen. Beck, who is on the General Staff Corps eligible list, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his war services. He was made an officer of the Legion of Honor by the French government, which also conferred on him the Croix de Guerre with Palm and the Citation Certificate.

Worker Defeats Boss In Mayoral Election

Bath, Me., March 8 (AP).—This shipbuilding city had as a mayor-elect today a shipyard draftsman who defeated his boss.

Donald N. Small, Republican and son of former Democratic mayor, piled up a 500-vote majority yesterday over Archilbald M. Main, vice president and general of the Bath Iron Works Corporation. Main, an enrolled Republican, was the Democratic condidate.

U.S. Flag Taken Off Canton Isle, House Is Told

Mrs. Jenckes Asks Committee to Investigate Report.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Jenckes (Democrat), Indiana, asked the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday to investigate reports that an American flag had been torn from its foundation on Canton Island "and carried off to London."

The American flag first was unveiled on a marble marker erected on the small Pacific Island, May 30, 1937, by the American Geographic Society-United States Navy eclipse expedition.

"I am astounded to learn by way of press reports," Mrs. Jenckes wrote, "that Great Britain is claiming possession of the island and that the porcelain enamel steel flags have been ripped out of their concrete monument, which was torn down, and the flags have been sent to London."

Meanwhile, Secretary Hull said yesterday the United States and Great Britain had an understanding in detail with respect to Canton and Enderbury Islands. He refused, however, to say that the question is definitely settled.

Commons Agog.

London, March 8 (AP).—President Roosevelt's move to take over the Islands of Canton and Enderbury in the South Pacific caused a stir in the House of Commons today. The islands have been claimed by Great Britain.

Arthur Henderson, Laborite, and Roland Robinson, Conservative, gave notice they would ask Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tomorrow what the British government is doing to "preserve British rights."

Boy's 'Tall' Tales Puzzling Sheriff Of Virginia Town

Accomac, Va. (U.P.).—A 13-year-old boy walked into a filling station near here late today and told a weird story of having been kidnaped from his home in Philadelphia by three men, bound, gagged, driven 200 miles in an automobile and then thrown into a ditch.

Sheriff E. P. Parks said the boy, who called himself "Stanley Klare," later "confessed" that he was an escaped inmate of the Paul Revere Industrial School at Baltimore, but a check with Philadelphia police revealed that Stanley Klara, 13, had disappeared from home after his father scolded him for not attending school. Accomac authorities are holding the boy for investigation.

Civic Body Seeks New Police Unit

The Northeast Boundary Citizens Association last night voted to ask that the Eleventh Precinct be divided into two police precincts and that additional police be provided for the area. To back its demands, the association appointed a committee to present to the commissioners a list of crimes that have taken place in the area recently.

The association also named three delegates to attend the suffrage meeting here March 18. The delegates were instructed to vote for District suffrage and for the councilmanic system of local government.

H.E. Kincaid, FHA Aide, Talks to Architects Club

H. Evert Kincaid, land planning consultant for the Federal Housing Administration, described creation of stable neighborhoods through strict land planning before 35 members of the Landscape Architects Dinner Club last night. Louis Croft, club president, urged the architects to join citizens associations in their neighborhoods and participate in "model home" projects and other community activities.

Birthday Fete At Mayfair to Set Fast Pace

Pall Mall Room Pauses in Mexico, Coming Back From Rio.

By Chanticleer

The third anniversary party at the Mayfair is practically here and, if things go off as planned, what a party it will be!

Here is the complete list of entertainers: Beverly Stull with accordion and smile; Leo Lissee, back again with vocal selection all his own; Perry Martin, barytone and pianist; Nedra Andrea, a newcomer with refreshing vocal renditions; Countess H. De Bournat, who tells the past and reveals the future, and the Continental Trio, which will be on hand both for lunch and dinner. Chef Everhard has produced many delicacies for the occasion from his storehouse of delightful recipes.

After "rolling down to Rio" last week and receiving much favorable comment for so doing, the Pall Mall room pauses tonight in Mexico to participate in a fiesta. To the clash of tambourines and the clicking of castanets, gay senors and senoritas will protray the native dances of Old Mexico. Mario, with his guitar, will show how the young senor seranades his love. On the special program are Manor and Mignon, late of the Copacabana of Rio de Janeiro; Lucille and Rene, whose forte is the Spanish dance, and the clever Virginia Hunter dancers.

Gay Nineties Still Here.

The Lindsey girls in the Tintype Revue are held over at the Lotus for another week. These belles of the gay nineties have revived memories of bygone days when "strolling down the avenue" was the thing to do. The show also features a circus act, with Yvonne and Vernon in their famous ladder trick.

Beryle and Martinez, ballroom team, seen at the Lotus three years ago, are back for their first American appearance since returning from France. Joe Tinker, son of the famous Chicago ballplayer, displays some fast footwork in eccentric dance routines, Buddy Shaner sings, Al Norton officiates as m. c. and Bill Strickland's "ork" provides music for dancing.

The Winter Garden Revue continues at the Bamboo Gardens, rounding out a fifth week, which marks up some kind of record. There are 27 in the cast and they have 86 specialities in their repertoire, so there never is a chance of repetition. However, they have several other clubs to visit before heading North for the resort towns, so if you haven't been to see their clever show you still have a chance.

Champagne Cocktails.

Oscar's inauguration of the imported champagne cocktail at the popular Hi Hat cocktail lounge has made many a would-be scotch and soda drinker an ardent imbiber of this palatable, sparkling nectar. Dick Reger's rendition of the "hillbilly" numbers and his jew's harp imitations (as only a Virginian can do them) are too good to miss.

The No. 1 Hit at the Madrillon this week is Martha, of course, played swing style a la Shaw. Johnny says he gets three requests for that number to one of any other. Helen Forrest does the singing and that is another reason for its popularity.

Those of you who haven't seen and heard the glamorous Helen Green at the King Cole Room are urged to do so. Miss Washington of last year has not only glamour and personality, but a lovely voice that is trained for swing.

Mac McCaffery and his orchestra continue to be a favorite with diners and dancers at Brinkley's where the policy of no cover or minimum charge finds favor with patrons.

At the Rainbow Room of the Hamilton Motel, Milt Davis, M. C., dispenses clever repartee and friendliness to make this a favorite spot with the younger set.

Radio Station Faces Quiz.

New York, March 8 (AP).—The city council tonight ordered, by vote of 14 to 12, an investigation of the operation of Municipal Radio Station WNYC at the demand of Councilman Charles E. Keegan, who claimed a recent broadcast was Soviet propaganda.

Anniversary Singer

Show Depicts Care Of Travelers Aid

A regular day's work of doing everything from finding homes for unborn babies of unmarried mothers to showing drunks the way to go home was dramatized yesterday at a meeting of the Travelers Aid Society.

Instead of having long speeches, the society showed how it tries to patch broken lives in Washington's "no man's land" of people who have no legal residence.

The dramatization showed the difficulties faced by the society since collapse of Government aid for transients.

New members of the board elected were Mrs. John Beale Bloomer, Edward D. Merrill, Dion S. Birney, and Col. Robert H. Fletcher. Members re-elected were Dr. Stuart A. Rice, Mrs. Camden McAtee, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Bruce Mohler and Louis Ottenberg.

A total of 24,615 cases were cared for by the society last year. Expenditures were $6,910.83 for administration; $25,267.41, service, and $10,233.74, direct relief. Total was $42,411.98.

Senators Decide On D. C. Judges

A sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday decided in executive session whether or not to recommend three additional judges for the United States District Court in Washington, but Chairman Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, declined to make public the report.

The recommendation will not be disclosed, he said, until a report is filed with the full Judiciary Committee, probably tomorrow.

The action was taken following conclusion of public hearings in which Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, reiterated charges the justices do not spend enough time on their jobs.

He questioned Justices James M. Proctor and Jennings Bailey regarding the hours observed by the courts, the vacation periods and other matters.

A sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee will begin hearings today on a similar bill at 10:30 o'clock.

Dental Trials Of Washington Told to Parley

Dr. J. P. Burke, District President, Tells Progress Since Then.

If George Washington had had the services of modern dentists he probably would have been happier and might have lived longer, Dr. John P. Burke, president of the District of Columbia Dental Society, declared yesterday at the five-State post-graduate dental clinic.

"Dentistry at the time George Washington lived was giving the best it had," said Dr. Burke, of the most famous wearer of false teeth.

"The methods of dental service, as practiced at that time now are considered obsolete, but not crude.

Great Progress Shown.

"The profession since has shown great progress, and if Gen. Washington could have enjoyed in his day what our people enjoy today, he would have been more comfortable and happier. Perhaps he would have enjoyed better digestion—and consequently better health."

Modern dentistry would have made the lot of the colonial soldiers in their ragged blue pleasanter, Dr. George R. Ellis, chairman of the clinic, observed.

Dr. Ellis made it plain that he referred not only to work on deficient or missing teeth, but to plastic surgery as well.

"They had no way of compensating for the loss of teeth, or alleviating the pain of abcesses," he said.

Both Dr. Burke and Dr. Ellis spoke after an address by Dr. Alexander H. Paterson, of Baltimore, who took as his topic "Clinical Aspects of Full Denture Prosthesis. Their Diagnosis and Correction."

Dr. Carr a Speaker.

Dr. Malcolm W. Carr, of New York City, told the clinic that deaths from spreading mouth and jaw infections are "much higher than suspected."

"Extensive infections," he told the clinic, in session at the Mayflower Hotel, "are more dangerous when they are from the lower teeth. They are more common, usually more complicated and potentially more serious because of anatomical relation of the lower jaw to the neck tissues."

"Clinical and Surgical Anatomical Consideration of Infection About the Mouth and the Jaws" was discussed by Dr. Oscar W. Batson, of Philadelphia.

Soviet Protests Holding Of 2 Vessels by Japan

Tokyo, March 8 (AP).—Mikhail M. Lsavutsky, Soviet ambassador, today protested continued detention of two Russian steamers in northern Japan ports and of a Soviet airplane in northeastern Manchoukuo.

The Japanese foreign office countered with charges that Soviet authorities were "illegally holding" 58 Japanese subjects in Russian Sakhalin and nine Japanese fishing vessels.

'Let the Corporations Alone,' New York Economist Pleads in Senate Hearing.

The present recession "wouldn't be here if we let business work out its own way," declared Merwin K. Hart, president of the New York State Economic Council, at a hearing yesterday before a Senate Judiciary sub-committee on the Borah-Mahoney bill to license corporations.

Hart contended the Federal licensing poposal would bring "an entire new set of inspectors to harass the corporations." The bill, he asserted, "spells the setting up of another huge bureaucracy under which corporate private enterprise would be wholly unworkable—would utterly bog down."

Government publicity agents drew the ire of Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey. He introduced a resolution for a House inquiry of Federal publicity operations. "The creation and maintenance of gigantic propaganda bureaus of the New Deal is a direct violation of a statute passed by Congress in 1913," he said.

Thomas declared there were at least 270 Government employes engaged in "preparing propaganda for the New Deal at the taxpayers' expense." Their salaries, he said, exceeded $602,000 yearly, with 11 receiving salaries of more than $8,000 and 63 others more than $4,000 annually.

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, yesterday opposed before a Senate Committee the compulsory education of CCC boys. "It would not work," he testified, explaining that although 40 hours of work per week was required of CCC enrollees there was ample time and opportunity for them to obtain education and vocational training if they wished to do so.

Fechner testified at a hearing on the bill of Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, to set up a National Youth Training system with $500,000 in Federal funds. Lundeen reviewed his career in his own testimony and other witnesses included Dr. Thomas Minehan, administrator of the Minnesota Youth Survey; Dr. Howard M. Bell, representing the American Youth Commission of the American Council of Education, and Mrs. D. Creighton Burnham, director of the Oklahoma Industrial School for Girls.

Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, ardent prohibition pleader, yesterday attacked before a Senate committee a bill to permit the sending of eight-ounce "samples" of liquor through the mails. The House had already approved the measure but Shepard declared the legislation would make the Government postoffice "part of the liquor dealers" and render parents "powerless to prevent sending of liquor to minor children."

The movement to boycott Japan was denounced by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York. He said, "The theory of economic boycotts has the tendency of straining international relationships to the point of war."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Former Suitor Now High-Hats Her, But Girl Is Determined to Win Him Back; How to Do It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps you will think this letter absurd because I am so young but I am sincere and am pretty sure I know what I want. I am a girl of 16 and have liked a certain boy for two years. We had a dancing class in junior high school and I met him there. He cut in on me quite often and also asked me to be his partner. Then every Friday night there was a dance at school. He danced with me all evening and saw me home afterward. He showed every evidence of liking me and yet he was indifferent. He is the type of person who won't speak to you when he is in better company than he considers you.

• • • •

During the summer vacation I went away. I wrote to him and he answered very nicely and promptly. Then we went to senior high school and he got in with a crowd of seniors. Since then he hasn't danced with me and only speaks when he has to. I sent him a birthday card, a Christmas card and a Valentine's card. He never said a word about them to me. Then I wrote him a letter telling how much I cared for him and he answered it. He told me all the pretty girls he goes with mean nothing to him. Why does he go with them then? It is just for show and to make him "It" around school. He also said: "Keep up your courage. I'll be back perhaps." What's he waiting for?

• • • •

He is a year older than I, and he has an elder brother who is as nice to me as he can be. I realize I made my mistake in letting him know I cared for him, and I also realize that love at this age very seldom lasts. I go out with different boys real often and yet I care for no one but this one boy who doesn't have anything to do with me. I would like to know just what I can do to get his attention once again? Sincerely,

DETERMINED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DETERMINED: You probably have gone far enough in the direction of letting this boy know you care for him to be able to turn that admission to good account in a campaign designed to bring him to heel at once. Having worn your heart on your sleeve for a time, now take it off and tuck it away where he can never read it again. Since he regards it as a mark of superiority to be accepted by an older group, see what you can do by way of annexing an upper classman as a steady beau. If his elder brother shows you any attention, encourage him and make the most of it. Perhaps, through him, you can make friends with other boys his age, one of whom might show you marked attention and thereby put the stamp of the "older set's" approval upon you.

• • • •

The only way to deal with a snob is to snub him in turn, and if your beloved "snoots" you when he is in the company of the elect (as he estimates it) and speaks to you "only when he has to," he richly deserves snubbing. Send him no more cards, no more letters. Make it altogether unnecessary for him to speak to you at all; indeed, rather difficult to do so. Never seek his eye with yours; turn aside when you see him coming; turn your back on him in the same room, or when and if he joins your group. A consistent course of deliberate cold-shouldering will have him wondering and investigating, eventually, particularly since it will be in such extraordinary contrast to your erstwhile plaintive pursuit.

• • • •

When he finally approaches you with some manner of greeting (as he undoubtedly will), give him plenty of uphill work to do. Ignore his first approach entirely. If he persists, say "Oh, I beg your pardon. Were you speaking to me——?" And register mild surprise. If he asks for an explanation of your conduct, act as though you don't know what he is talking about: as though there were nothing to explain; as though his approach were inexplicable and astonishing.

• • • •

If he ventures to remind you of your late great passion for him, shrug it off, in the fashion of, "Oh-h-h! That! That was last month. I've long since come to my senses, thank heaven. And how have you been?" Adopt an attitude of perfunctory civility and polite indifference. Rebuke him for his recent rudeness by dealing him an indirect cut. In other words, move away without giving him a chance to engage you in investigatory conversation. If he telephones, plead a rush engagement and cut the conversation short in a hurry. Tell him to call you another time, and set no date for it. Tell him you're not sure when you'll be in. If he writes, either ignore his message altogether or write briefly in a noncommittal or cheerfully indifferent vein. You might tell him it's everybody's privilege to make a fool of himself now and again; that it's painful while it lasts, but amusing to look back on after it's over, and now you've reached the stage when you can laugh at your crush on him, when you think of it at all. Tell him thanks for the sleigh ride, and if he never comes back it's all the same to you.

• • • •

If, as and when he asks you for a date, don't fall feverishly in with his plans. Put him to the necessity of asking for your company at least twice before accepting, and if the day ever comes that you should be going out with him again, don't quaveringly speak of love. Keep completely off the subject. Lightly dismiss it. Refuse to discuss it. Say, "That's over with." Try to act exactly as you would act in the company of one of those other boys you go out with, and don't care anything about. And keep consistently to such a course thereafter, if you want him, instead of yourself, occupying the anxious seat in this romance.

• • • •

In the meantime, put a complete stop to this constant day-dreaming about him. When you aren't seeing him, don't think about him. Go out with other boys, by all means, and instead of mentally comparing them with him, try to imagine yourself a girl who has been a wall-flower and who is delighted beyond words to have this opportunity for making headway in a friendship with a boy. It will add immeasurably to your social technique to try to find real bonds of mutual interest with each boy in turn. Put considerations of love out of your mind for the moment; see what friendship with many can bring you.

• • • •

It can bring you much, I assure you. It can bring you that wholesome popularity which eases any heartache; it can bring you understanding of human nature; adriotness in managing men; an increasing capacity for forgetting yourself through consciously interesting yourself in others' lives and problems and plans; anl it can bring you an ever-widening circle of acquaintances out of which may emerge a real true-love one day. You aren't taking this reversal in love with the proper gameness of spirit. You are, to use the vernacular, letting it get you down. An errant suitor is never really lost to the lady who lets him go without the flicker of an eyelash; he will always be back to see her who apparently doesn't care, and I suppose that is because men like girls of pride and independence; girls who can take 'em or leave 'em; girls who have a dauntless spirit that can never be really conquered.

Today's TALK HEALTH

Care of Newborn Baby.

The young parents of the first new baby are in for a host of doubts, fear and abysmal consciousness of lack of experience. It seems such a fragile little thing and so helpless. Just what are we to do about taking care of it? Oh! about a thousand different things.

Well, it isn't quite as fragile as it looks, and although it does need a good deal of attention it will get along most of the time on its own.

Keep it fed, keep it clean, keep it aerated and keep it rested—that is about all there is to it.

How to keep it fed we will discuss tomorrow.

As for keeping it clean, the healthy baby should be bathed every day at the same hour. The most convenient time is about half an hour after mother's breakfast.

For the bath get:

1. Soap—pure and mild, castile.
2. Several soft towels.
3. A baby's bathtub or a dishpan or a washbowl.
4. Wash cloths—one for face, one for body.
5. Powder—in a dusting can, to prevent chafing.
6. Petroleum jelly—to use on sore parts of the skin.
7. Boric acid solution for eye wash.
8. A fine, soft hairbrush.
9. Apron for mother.
10. Cotton.
11. Pail or basket for dirty clothes.
12. Clean socks, diapers, band, etc.
13. Table covered with clean sheet, two chairs—one for mother, one for bathtub.
14. Scissors to cut toenails.

Temperature of the bath should be lukewarm, about 98 to 100 degrees. Always put the water in the tub before undressing the baby. Always test the temperature of the water with your elbow before putting the baby in. As the baby gets older, make the bath a little cooler.

The sponge bath should last about 5 minutes. The tub bath about 7.

Always hold the baby while in the tub. Never leave it even if the Angel Gabriel is on the telephone.

Wash the eyes first by dipping a small piece of coton in warm boric solution (to make a proper boric acid solution put a glassful—eight ounces—of water on to boil; then add a level teaspoonful of boric acid crystals, and continue boiling, stirring with a spoon until dissolved.)

Wash the nose by twisting a piece of cotton around a toothpick, then slip the toothpick off and wash the nose by gently turning the end of the cotton around inside the nostrils.

Wash the ears gently, never pulling at them, one at a time, and dry.

Wash the head, then the arms and body, with soap and water, then the legs and buttocks.

Dust the powder into the skin folds. Dress and brush the hair, if any.

Sleep—A healthy, newborn baby should sleep nearly all the time except when it is being nursed or bathed. During the second and third months there should be 18 to 20 hours of sleep every day.

Exercise Is Most Effective Tonic for Spring

MARIE WILSON, young movie comedienne, demonstrates an exercise to reduce the girth. Lying flat on the floor she flexes the knee, raises the leg to a right angle, twists at the waist and touches the point of the knee to the floor on the other side, then repeats with the other leg.

IN THE ALL-PURPOSE streamliner, demonstrated above, Miss Wilson lies full length on the floor on the side, with hand on floor to brace body and swings the legs vigorously in a scissors-like motion making as wide an excursion as possible. After 20 counts, she rests and reverses.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SPRING is no time to have bulging hips and a barrel waistline. You can't expect to feel as chipper as the first robin if you are dragging around 20-odd pounds of excess girth. Those extra pounds will make you feel stodgy, old and in the way.

Take your spring tonic in a gym suit. You will find exercise much more effective than the old-fashioned dose of sulphur and molasses and the beauty of exercise is that it gives you a new point of view and a younger figure.

A few simple exercises taken daily and in the right position can make you over. The positions and movements are easy to remember: Stretching, twisting and bending for the waist; leg swinging and high back-kicking for the hips and derriere; arm circling and upward stretching to firm the upper arms, raise the bust and straighten the shoulders. And there, in a few well chosen movements, is the secret of success, with exercise.

Exercise Suggestions.

Now, so that I won't be too unpopular, here is an exercise that will give you back your slim waistline, flatten the tummy and reduce the hips all at the same time.

POSITION: On the back on the floor, stretched to full extension, arms upstretched overhead and legs extended downward.

MOVEMENT: Flexing the knee, raise the right leg to a right angle. Then, keeping the upper part of the body as flat as possible on the floor, twist at the waist and touch the point of the knee to the floor on the other side of the left leg. Now, perform with the left leg, touching the kneepoint to the floor on the other side of the right leg. Repeat 12 times, gradually increasing to 25. A nice workout!

In an exercise each movement counts. The things to remember in this exercise are to flex the knee and bring it to right angles, and to keep the shoulders on the floor and twist at the waistline. Raising the knee to right angles strengthens the muscles of the abdomen.

All-Purpose Exercise.

Here is another all-purpose streamliner:

MOVEMENT: Swing the legs vigorously in a scissors-like motion, making as wide an excursion as possible. Swing for 20 counts, rest, and reverse sides. You should be able to work up to 80 swings in all, resting after each 20 counts.

Measurements change as muscles improve in tone, and those two exercises taken daily can make a phenomenal difference in your figure.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Eater-Out.

If someone would leave me one million dollars,
Or I could make a killing on Wall Street,
I would immediately open a model restaurant
To aid fellow feminine victims

II

It is needless to say I would serve lumpless oatmeal,
Also smooth cream of wheat and mashed potatoes.
My big break with precedent would be buttered toast
That was thickly buttered clear to the corners,
Not sopped in the middle.

III

I would be the promulgator of a sandwich
That was streamlined and of definite feminine gender,
Having some refinement, not vulgarly fat,
Substantial in meat and light on the starch,
And BOTH slices buttered.

IV

I would not present an array of anemic vegetables
That tasted as though they were cooked in wash boilers,
But would have them well seasoned, possessing some "Umph,"
So customers would not have to stop by the drug store
For their vitamins.

V

Regarding biscuits, I would do something revolutionary.
When I said they were "hot" they would really melt butter.
They would never be fat, doughy and overdeveloped,
But small, brown and snappy, of genteel appeal
And not to please trucksters.

VI.

If ever I advertised strawberry shortcake,
The cake would be "short" and with plenty of berries,
Not two hunks of cake, nor yet a split biscuit,

VII

I would have lots of salads, and all without aliases.
There would be no Olympus Delight nor Nudists on Skis,
But those who wanted slaw with boiled dressing
Or tomatoes and cucumbers, grapefruit and orange,
Would find them so listed.

VIII.

My chicken pies would go light on potatoes and carrots;
My fruit cups play down canned fruit and raw apples;
My jello would shimmie, not be stiff and stand-offish.
Guests wanting lettuce would not be served a whole bed
With infinitesimal dressing.

IX

In event my restaurant was a cafeteria,
My attendants would not always shout, "Serve you, please?"
At confused customers, nor yet insist on handing them coffee,
Nor assume they undoubtedly wished French fries
With every steak order.

X

All men would be barred from cafeteria patronage
Unless they could prove enough mental agility
To go down the line without gumming the works
By asking fool questions about what was what
Or how were the girlies?

XI

If I should employ waiters of either gender,
They would not haughtily move guests' bags, bundles and papers
To make way for the silver; nor yet would they hover
And fill up the glasses just at the big moment
Of gossip retailing.

XII

Yes, my restaurant might perform a charitable function,
But, again, it might not; so I'd best keep my million
For women bereft of any bad food to berate
Or cooking to gripe at might be hard put
To make conversation.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 8.

THE HISTORY of the entertainment business is filled with the names of classic "sister acts." Some, like the Boswells, won fame and gold—others, like the Cherry Sisters, garnered fresh-plucked vegetables—from the peanut gallery, and were forced to carry their own nets. "Sister acts" have always been a staple of show business, and I galloped off not long ago to witness the latest family group of girls—the Andrews Sisters!

ALICE HUGHES

It was this trio of long-legged youngsters from Minneapolis who did so much to popularize this season's song plague, "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen," and when the girls planed in from Chicago to put another song on wax their arrival was almost stop-press news here. I caught up with La Verne, Patty and Maxene at the recording studio where they were to immortalize "Joseph," which is what the music trade calls a "novelty numbah" and whose owners hope will repeat the colossal click of "Buy Beer, Mr. Shane." The new song was also a Jewish number, and was written by Nellie Cashman way back in 1922. It is now owned by the Kammen Brothers, who bought "Bei Mir" for $30 cash.

The Andrews girls fascinated me, as they waited to go to work—with an eight-piece band before the microphone. The youngest, Patty, who is only 17, seems to be the acknowledged straw-boss of the trio. The girls work hard and seriously, and no trouble arose until Mr. Stephens, the recording director, tried to get them to discard their chewing gum. "We always sing with it!" said Patty. The gum stayed in, and "Joseph" came out. The girls fed it out many times, and at last had a perfect record. So be warned, friends. Soon you'll put a nickel in the music machine, and out will come a plaintive plea,

"Oh, Joseph—won't you name the day?" That will be the Andrews Sisters, building, we hope and trust, another sleep-destroying hit!

Official Society Guests At the Gudgers' Tea

Dozens Go to Navy Yard Party Including Mmes. Stone, Reed, Ellis, Borah, McNary, Davis and Pittman.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Slim, sleek limousines were rolling into the Navy Yard in dozens yesterday afternoon, when Captain and Mrs. Emmet O. Gudger, and the latter's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Walsh, entertained at tea in the Gudger quarters. Entertaining in the Capital continues at a lively clip, despite Lent, and this party was one of the most pleasant of the season.

Mrs. Gudger wore a frock of black net, gold stenciled in a leafy design. A corsage of gardenias completed her ensemble. Standing with her were Mr. and Mrs. Walsh, the latter in dark blue chiffon with a braided jacket. Although not in the receiving line, Capt. Gudger also did his share in greeting guests and escorting them to the dining room.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The lace-covered tea table was centered with a big bouquet of roses, tulips and jonquils flanked by four yellow candles in tall silver holders. Tea, coffee, sandwiches, olives, and angel food cake made up the menu. For guests who preferred other drinks, a tray bearing a wide choice of cocktails and punch was passed again and again.

Mrs. H. F. Stone Among the Guests

Among guests were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wearing a black frock and small hat with a mink cape; Mrs. Stanley Reed, in a black ensemble, talking with Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis; Rear Admiral J. J. Cheatham, chatting with Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles R. Conrad; Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, in a dark blue dress and hat, worn with a silver-fox cape; Mrs. James J. Davis and Mrs. Key Pittman.

Also, Justice and Mrs. Joseph W. Cox, Justice and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti and Judge Joseph R. Jackson. Lieut. Jack Garden, who recently returned from China, was answering questions on all sides about the situation there. Incidentally, Lieut. Garden plans to be off again soon—this time to Argentina. Others glimpsed among the guests included Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, and Miss Florence Woolley—to mention at random a few of the many who were there.

Officiating junior hostess for the tea was Gloria Gudger, who was a pretty picture in her floor-length organza frock. Very much missed at the party was her older sister, Miss Elinor Gudger, who is attending Mount Holyoke College. She will be home March 24 for her spring vacation.

Confusing Albanians and Albinos

A rumor going the rounds indicates that Sheridan's famous "Mrs. Malaprop" has nothing on a prominent Washington hostess. The latter, who made it a point to catch a glimpse of King Zog's sisters on their recent visit to the Capital, confessed shortly afterward that she was extremely disappointed, "because they don't have pink eyes and white hair!"

OF PERSONAL NOTE: Mrs. Benjamin Rogers, of New York, who is visiting her nephew, Robert Coe, was among guests at Mrs. Marriam Curtis' small dinner for Mme. Simopoulos last evening at the 1925 F Street Club . . . Victor Mircea Babes, Charge d'Affaires of the Rumanian Legation, yesterday confirmed the report that Ruda Iremesco, former minister of navy and aviation in Bucharest, has been appointed to succeed Charles Davila as Rumanian Envoy to Washington . . . Mr. Iremesco, whose wife is an American, is expected to arrive next month . . . The musicale planned by Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg for March 22 will fall on the Senator's birthday.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., entertained at dinner last evening. Among their guests were Vincent Sheean, noted journalist and author, and Mrs. Sheean . . . Miss Mary Cecil Allen, one of the best known Australian women artists, who was a house guest of Mrs. Morgenthau recently, returned to New York Monday. Miss Allen is interested in murals, and came to Washington to inspect those in Federal buildings . . . Mme. Julia Cantacuzene will entertain at dinner at the Sulgrave Club Sunday evening . . . The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Hirosi Saito have invitations out for dinner March 31 . . .

Mrs. Arthur Henning and Mrs. Donald Richberg will be joint hostesses at a musicale Friday afternoon at Mrs. Henning's home on Thirty-second street. Both will celebrate their birthdays that day . . . Robin Maugham, nephew of Somerset Maugham, noted British novelist, who spent the past few days in Washington, left yesterday for New York.

Soon to Visit New Hampshire Friends

Hessler Studio.

Miss Marjorie Garland, daughter of William S. Garland, of Chevy Chase, Md., soon will be leaving town for Portsmouth, N. H., to be the house guest there of the commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, Admiral Cyrus W. Cole and Mrs. Cole. Before returning to Washington, she will also visit friends in New London, Conn.

Mrs. Pettengill Honors Clarkes

Mrs. George Pettengill, wife of Admiral Pettengill, Commandant of the Navy Yard, was hostess yesterday afternoon at a small, informal cocktail party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Clarke, of Connecticut. The dining room was decorated with snapdragons, and larkspurs blossomed in vases in other parts of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, their next-door neighbors when the latter couple vacation in New England.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

EXCEPT FOR Mrs. Roosevelt (scrambled eggs of a Sunday evening) and Mrs. Barner (lunch for the Vice President) the art of amateur cooking has few devotees among prominent women in the Capital. Instead, it's the men who belong to the chafing dish school whose members like nothing better than to whip up something of an evening to amuse their friends.

One of these tells us that there are probably more amateur men cooks in Washington than any other American city—and good ones, too. The constant influx of foreign diplomats and Army and Navy officers makes for a bustling exchange of recipes, he says. Jules Henry, Col. Frank Morse Count Roberti, George Henry Paine, Federal communications commissioner; Baron Mario Bucovich, Italian photographer; Viscount Henri de Sibour; Robert Fleming and George M. Ray are a few to whom eating is something more than stoking the furnace.

DUDLEY HARMON.

A "ONE DISH MAN" is Mr. Fleming, who last summer acquired the art of grilling steak over charcoal at his summer place in Delaware. He has been practicing up on his new talent all winter. Roasted oysters are the specialty of George Hutchison, of the National Geographic Society. Properly cooked, there's nothing better, although several mean men have remarked emphatically that preparing this dish is beyond the reach of a woman. The oysters are cooked smothered under wet sea weed (if in the open, or wet bags (indoors) and are served with hot melted butter and Worcestershire sauce.

• • • •

JULES HENRY wields a wicked skillet, especially when it comes to a certain dish made of Swiss cheese and white wine. Count Roberti of the Italian Embassy likes to serve spaghetti which he has cooked himself.

A specialist in the obsolete is Commissioner Paine. His home on Long Island is filled with a notable collection of cookbooks, some of them dating back a thousand years. If you want to know what they ate at the court of Louis XIV, just ask him.

Good at the common, or spinach variety of cooking is George M. Ray. He goes in for the simple things, perfectly prepared on his yacht, which is moored conveniently near the Seventh street markets. Although content, when alone, with an apple and a sandwich, Dr. Kemper Simpson likes to do well by his friends. He knows just how things should be made; collects French and Hungarian menus, and likes to serve his guests dishes such as homard americain and crepes suzette. Photographer Bucovich uses every pot, pan and dish in the kitchen where he is preparing a meal and goes in among other things for rich desserts made with lots of sherry and egg.

• • • •

BUT THE COOK among cooks is Col. Frank Morse, epicure extraordinary since boyhood days when he offered to do the cooking so as to be allowed to go on camping trips with the big guys. He is a champion when it comes to New Orleans dishes like gumbo file, a mixture of chicken, crab meat, shrimp, oysters and vegetables such as okra and carrots. His favorite recipe, and one which goes over best with his friends, he acquired from the famous Austrian restaurant of Frau Sacha, which was portrayed in the play "Reunion in Vienna." Visiting the capital some time ago with Gilbert Miller, Col. Morse pried from the proprietor her secret of steaming the finest cut of beef for nine hours and then mixing it with half a dozen vegetables.

Col. Morse, who writes as well as he cooks, has just published a life of Henry Miller, father of Gilbert and one of the greatest stage directors of all time. The author was for many years closely associated with the artist, and calls his volume "Back Stage with Henry Miller."

French Ambassador And Jules Henry Are Honor Guests

Also present were Michel Detroyat, inspector gentral of the nationalized aviation industries of France, and Henri Guillamet, chief pilot of the South Atlantic air service of France. They arrived Monday on the Queen Mary. M. Detroyat will study recent developments in aviation here and investigate American plans for a trans-Atlantic air route. He and M. Guillamet will be in Washington for several days.

Dressy Coats for a Versatile Spring

Paris says, more than ever before, one good coat is the background of the wardrobe, Erlebacher thinks so, too, and has assembled a coat collection of elegance and charm of which our slim, fitted, old-fashioned, new-fashioned Poiret twill is significant. P.-T. A. Leaders Frame Spring Season Plans

Safety Program Arranged for Electrical Institute Next Week; State Convention to Be Held May 3 and 4.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Plans for the spring season, including the annual safety program to be held at the Electric Institute next week and the State convention, set for May 3 and 4 at the Departmental Auditorium, were discussed yesterday at the meeting of the board of managers of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Walter B. Fry, State president, announced Dr. Homer P. Rainey, director of the National Youth Council, as one of the chief speakers for the May convention, the program for which is in charge of Mrs. Ralph Hoagland.

The business of the spring meeting will include election of second, fourth and sixth vice presidents, secretary, treasurer and historian. Other officers including the president, carry over until next year. Mrs. Clinton Ward, chairman of the nominating committee, has serving with her Mrs. George Corbin, Mrs. William C. Dowden, Mrs. Mabel Hubbel and Mrs. Alma Hudson. The slate they have submitted names Mrs. J. Phil Campbell for second vice President; Mrs. E. J. Dowling for fourth vice presidnet (the office she now holds); Mrs. Richard J. Purcell, sixth vice president; Mrs. Walter Greenleaf, secretary; Mrs. William A. Moyer, treasurer, and Mrs. F. E. Manning, historian.

Mrs. J. Darlington Denit was elected yesterday as third vice president, to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Charles D. Lowe, who was recently named to fill an unexpired term as first vice president. Mrs. Denit is president of the Phoebe Hearst Parent-Teacher Association.

Panel Discussion On Safety Announced

The annual safety program next Wednesday will include a panel discussion at which Mrs. Pearl Clark, State chairman of safety, for the District of Columbia Congress, will preside. Mrs. Fry will open the meeting, and on the panel will be W. A. Van Duzer, director of vehicular traffic; M. O. Eldridge, assistant director; Capt. Milton D. Smith, of the traffic division of the Metropolitan Police, and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the woman's safety committee of the District of Columbia Motor Club of the American Automobile Association.

"Legislation" and "Motor Vehicle Administration, Enforcement and Education" will be the subject of the panel, and 20 minutes will be given over to general discusion at the end of the program. A film, "Hit and Run Driver," which is being presented at the meeting of the Women's Safety Committee at the Sulgrave Club, will be shown in connection with this program, and Richard Ham, director of safety for the District of Columbia Motor Club, will discuss it.

Another feature of the Wednesday program will be a radio skit, "Keeping Them Safe," presented by a group from Gordon Junior High School Luncheon will be served at noon, and in the afternoon there will be brief talks by representatives of the Red Cross, Tuberculosis Association, National Child Research Bureau, District of Columbia Board of Health, Electric Institute, and by Miss Gertrude Knott, director of the folk festival which is being sponsored by The Washington Post in May.

Summer Round-up Already Being Planned

The board of managers, at its meeting yesterday, also discussed the summer "round-up," in which parents of children who are to be enrolled in school for the first time next September will be encouraged to have them undergo a physical examination for the purpose of having any physical defects corrected by the time they start to school. Mrs. P. C. Ellett, fifth vice president of the District of Columbia Congress, and Mrs. Alma Hudson, chairman of the summer round-up, are in charge of the project. Acting on a suggestion from the National Congress, which has indorsed the undertaking, the board voted yesterday to ask representatives of the D. C. Medical Society, the D. C. Dental Society, the D. C. Health Department, the Board of Education, Tuberculosis Association and the Visiting Nurse Association to form an advisory committee for the round-up.

The first Parent-Teacher Association in the country to inaugurate the summer round-up was one in Macon, Ga., according to Mrs. Fry, and this association reports that the class on which the experiment was made is now in high school and has the record of being the healthiest class to be graduated there.

Textile Tricks Shown to Club In Chevy Chase

Tricks in the use of textiles to give hte sense of space as well as freshness and comfort to the small room, were explained to members of the art section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club yesterday by Mrs. Helen Zagat, lecturer, author and decorator, of New York, who addressed them. The meeting at which she spoke was held at the home of Mrs. Oscar B. Hunter, with Mrs. Benjamin H. Bennett, chairman of the section, presiding.

The trend of interest today is in softness of nets and laces, said Mrs. Zagat, showing pictures of homes in New York suburbs she used for recent magazine articles written for House Beautiful and Arts and Decoration.

A small house should not be crowded with furniture and hangings, but neither need it be left bare and empty in an effort to give the appearance of greater size, said Mrs. Zagat. She used as an example of how an illusion of space could be achieved, a house with the living room and dining rooms opening out of each other. Each had a deep bay window. That at the back, in the dining room, was curtained with a diaphonous net and the one in front with the same, and with overdraperies of a heavier net rather than an opaque material. This afforded a greater feeling of depth in the two rooms, she pointed out. The chairs were in plain fabrics, including two of Napoleon design upholstered in red plush to add weight and dignity.

Mrs. Zagat prefaced her discussion of themes in decoration with a story of textiles through the ages. She traced the history of net-making from its beginning, showing a picture of Egyptian net made in 2000 B. C. and of Coptic net of the period 600 A . D. and touched on high points in the history of lace-making among the Italian, French and Flemish and in this country.

Many overlook the fact that much handsome lace was made and used in the American Colonies, even in their earliest history, she said. Not only in the Southern colonies, but also in those of New England was it used. She illustrated with a picture of the Cooper Austin House of Cambridge, showing the bed with its tester draped in lace and a lace spread, bordered with a banding, 8 inches in width.

Alpha Chi Omega, one of the six oldest sororities in this country, was founded at DePauw University in 1885. It enjoys an unique place among its sisters, in that after 30 years of life as a national college music sorority, it dispensed with musical requirements with the exception of Zeta Chapter, New England Conservatory, Boston, and opened its membership to the students of the liberal arts. During its earlier years many world famous artists became affiliated with it as honorary members, among them, Teressa Careno, Fanny Bloomfield Zeisler, and Maud Powell.

Since Dr. Morrison's presidency of Alpha Chapter in 1888, this sorority consisting at that time of two chapters, with approximately 100 initiates, has expanded into one of the largest and most important in America, its two chapters increased to 50, its initiates to 15,698, with investment in chapter property aggregating $1,000,000. Its philanthropy has kept pace with its prosperity.

Dr. Morrison has long been prominent in music and social circles in Washington. She is a member of the Congressional and University Women's clubs, founded and directs the Washington Pianists' Club, while "for noteworthy service to the cause of music," she has received honorary memberships in the Washington Music Teachers Asscciation, the German Literary Society, and more recently, the honorary degree of doctor of music from the Washingfton College of Music.

Members of the Alpha Chi Omega in Washington, not affiliated with local groups, may receive invitations to the golden jubilee tea by communicating with Mrs. Wilson, 2310 Ashmead place.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Over the door you see a sign: "General of the Armies." . . . Inside sits an army captain in tweeds; to his right is a large room with two clerks among the filing cases; to his left, the General's large, somber dignified office.

• • • •

General Pershing's suite on the second floor of the State Dept. overlooks the executive wing of the White House across the street, where destiny never quite led him, despite 1918's augury.

Gen. Pershing . . . Martinet?

• • • •

On Black Jack Pershing's desk, as big as a ping-pong table, rests a blotter whose handle is a baseball autographed by Babe Ruth and Muggsy McGraw; at the other end, a small metal model of an army tank, among the trays and inkwells.

"—no one saluted me"

They have painted Pershing as a stern martinet who would rebuke a battery commander for a spot of mud on a gun carriage after a 20-mile trek through yellow French clay, or order the hub-caps of gun carriages scraped and polished for the sake of discipline and morale. But thousands of veterans leap to his defense when one criticizes him.

• • • •

A raw recruit, freshly arrived to reinforce the A. E. F. in the early autumn of 1917, was stumbling up the dark stairs of G. H. Q. at Chaumont in the old French caserne, when he encountered a tall, imposing soldier coming down.

• • • •

The gold cord on the campaign hat looked like the yellow cavalry cord, and the recruit didn't know much about insignia anyhow, so he didn't salute, though the stranger's uniform looked expensive. All he got was a searching look—and a few minutes later he discovered he had failed to salute the C. in C. of the AEF.

• • • •

A decade later the raw recruit was interviewing Gen. Pershing for a New York paper, and mentioned the incident to him.

"That's nothing," said Pershing, "no one ever saluted me in France."

• • • •

One day Pershing paid a surprise visit to American Air Service headquarters in Paris. At the moment the sentry at the courtyard entrance was engaged in badinage with a French girl. The general glared a moment at the scene—then grinned and gestured tolerantly to his aide. But the Air Service heard about it later.

"—the legend of the lessons"

One of the legends about Pershing was that he took lessons in military bearing from an actor of the Theatre Francaise . . . He never did, of course, and never needed to . . . One look at him was enough to stiffen the spine of the most jittery volunteer.

• • • •

There will be monuments galore for Pershing; but his best monument will remain his adamantine refusal to let our allies throw American soldiers out as clay pigeons on every sector, as replacements in their brigades . . . There might have been many more gold star mothers.

• • • •

Stern and austere he seemed with his armies; with his tunic off he was sentimental, friendly and lonely—ever since he lost his wife and children in that tragic blaze at the Presidio two years before the war . . . And lately, a lonely old man of 77, last of the allied generals whose pictures line his walls.

• • • •

His last command of one officer and three men waits for him, in the suite filled with old leather covered chairs and sofas, under the gilt and the chandeliers, under the paintings of Washington, Grant, Sherman and Sheridan, across the street from the white gleam of the President's mansion, to return and finish his last memoirs of the days when he was the symbol of the Last Crusade.

Frank Efforts To Improve Courts Asked

Bar Head Urges Tactful Exchanges of Criticism.

Laws Says Judges, Counsel Have Valid Complaints.

Judges and lawyers both have valid complaints of courtroom conduct Bolitha J. Laws, president of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, told the association last night at its monthly meeting at the Mayflower Hotel. He suggested that "full, frank and tactful discussion" between bench and bar would improve relations.

"It has been my observation," he said, "that too often the members of the bar have confined their relation with the court to the point of entertaining the judges, passing compliments to them and making their adverse criticisms, valid or otherwise, to others than members of the courts themseves. I have heard many lawyers, state that they felt that the judges of our courts in many instances were holding themselves aloof from the lawyers.

Judges Not Told of Flaws.

"There has been . . . talk . . . that judges have kept cases under advisement for an unreasonable length of time with serious consequences, that the judges have not been industrious, and at times there have been suggestions that the irascible attitude of some of the judges during the course of trials has influenced juries and has hurt the interests of their clients. Perhaps most of these criticisms have been unfounded, but some of them have had merit. I am convinced that on no occasion have any of them been frankly, sincerely and tactfully discussed with the representatives of the court involved."

The bar president criticized "slovenly manners, dress of counsel and an unbecoming attitude which is not in keeping with the dignity or welfare of the courts or the judicial system" which "judges at times have noticed." He said he had heard suggestions from judges that counsel do not always render the type of assistance expected and that "in many cases the attorney has not diligently looked up the law and that in some cases the arguments of serious points in court have been extemporaneous and not well considered."

Decries Policy on Judges.

Greater activity by the bar association concerning selection of judges and other officials was urged by the speaker, who said the past policy of simply asking for District men "has been disastrous."

"I believe this policy is not effective and that it will never prove so," he said. "To say we want a District of Columbia man as judge or district attorney, without giving indorsement to District of Columbia men admirably equipped to be a judge or district attorney, is neither co-operative nor efficient."

Law urged that the new Police Court Building be designated the "Criminal Courts Building" and that it be devoted solely to court functions. This, he said he understood, could readily be done by the District Commissioners upon proper representation that disposition of criminal cases would be speeded up by this arrangement.

The Committee on Administrative Practice, appointed last month by laws to study questions raised by practice before Government commissions, reported six general problems which the committee considered the association should consider. It suggestion the eventual necessity of establishing within the association a division to deal with this branch of practice.

Judge Curran Blames Slums For Criminality

President Roosevelt's slum-clearance policies were defended last night by Police Judge Edward M. Curran, who told members of the Massachusetts Democratic Club that prevalence of crime was closely related to poor housing conditions.

"We spent $26,000,000,000 for the destructive purposes of war," Curran exclaimed. "Yet when we spent less than $13,000,000,000 for the constructive purposes of peace the President was criticized for throwing away money."

Curran declared that "those who were tongue-tied in great crises and who found their voices only when the danger was past are in no position to criticize the policies and achievements of Franklin Roosevelt."

If living conditions are bettered, school, family and church life will be bettered, the judge asserted.

The crime situation in the District has become "acute," Curran said, adding that "the family, school, church and community are most important factors in the problem." He maintained that if children are taught "obedience and respect" for their parents, they will develop the same feeling toward the law.

Capital Penalty Spur to Murder, Journalist Holds

Terming capital punishment illogical, a failure, a stimulus to murder and a social blunder, Charles Edward Russell, 77-year-old journalist and Pulitzer prize winner, indicated to the Humane Education Society last night that basic guilt rests with society rather than with the criminal.

"Operations of human justice are too uncertain" to permit the death penalty, Russell declared. He referred to a District of Columbia murder case, in which a suspect who was "three times snatched from the electric chair" was subsequently "proved innocent."

Capital punishment actually stimulates crime, especially when executions are public, Russell averred in denial of the claim that the extreme penalty acts as a deterrent.

The speaker, who was one-time city editor of the New York World and later publisher of the Chicago American, charged that punishment by the state is mere "vengeance." He asserted that "the state hasn't the right to punish anybody for anything," but should discover the causes of crime and eliminate them.

O'Mahoney Warns of Dangers To Democracy in Talk at G. U.

"The principles of the Constitution stand in greater need of a sustaining hand today than at any time in our history," Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, last night told the student body of Georgetown College.

Senator O'Mahoney, a graduate of the Georgetown Law School, spoke on "The Constitution, a Charter of Democracy," at exercises in Gaston Hall sponsored by the students in celebration of the sesquicentennial anniversary of the Constitution, which is also the sesquicentennial of Georgetown.

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university; the Rev. John E. Grattan, S. J., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and members of the college faculty were the only guests.

Warning the student body that "it is up to you to wage a fight for the preservation of democracy," Senator O'Mahoney said that "the world shakes under the tread of the armies of Russia, Germany and Italy, which represent "a denial of the principles of our own Government."

E. James Hickey, president of The Yard, presided at the exercises, and leaders of the three oldest student organizations in the college, outdating any similar student groups in the United States, spoke on constitutional freedom.

George A. Dies, president of the 107-year-old Philodemic Debating Society, in speaking on "The Constitution and Freedom of Speech," declared that "freedom of speech and democracy are inseperable."

John F. Detmen, editor of the Georgetown College Journal, spoke on "The Constitution and Freedom of Religion" was the topic of John W. Nurre, prefect of the sodality.

Wage Order To Be Put in Effect May 8

Board Overrules Protests of Four Employer Groups.

The Minimum Wage Board yesterday approved the basic wages set for the women workers in the public housekeeping industries last month by the wage conference.

Following the public hearings yesterday when four groups of employers offered protests to the weekly wages set for the employes in the hotel, restaurant and allied industries, the board ruled that the basic rates become effective May 8. The minimums range between $13.25 and $17 weekly.

Meal Order Protested.

Miss Rose Brunswick, representing the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance, protested the board's recommendation that a deduction of 30 cents per meal may be made for employes of the industries affected who are given meals as part of their wage. She said that in many instances the waitresses and other employes were not served balanced meals by the employers. She insisted that the employes be allowed to buy their meals elsewhere if they so desired.

Col. P. M. Ashburn, superintendent of Columbia Hospital, speaking for the District Association of Hospital Superintendents, told the board his organization was opposed to the $17 wage for elevator girls, stating their needs were not greater than those of charwomen who received a smaller wage under the order. He said that men would probably replace the girls.

A protest against the wage set for elevator operators was voiced by Charles J. Rush, representing the Washington Real Estate Board. Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the board, in overruling the objection, said there were about 15 elevator operators in apartment houses affected by the order.

Lusk Objection Ignored.

A written protest, filed by Rufus S. Lusk, of the Building Owners and Managers Association, claimed that the board had failed to grant a special hearing before a special conference on wages for employes in office buildings and apartment houses. The board ruled that the question had been previously settled and furthermore the written protest was received by the board after the formal public hearing had been declared.

Economist to Speak.

Dr. Donald S. Watson, professor of economics at George Washington University, speaking at the sixth in a series of free lectures sponsored by the public night schools, will discuss taxation at 8:15 p. m. tonight in Central High School auditorium.

Seal Opposes Paid Welfare Bureau Here

Attacks House Proposal to Scrap Present System.

The House proposal to replace the present nine-member Board of Public Welfare with a board of three salaried members was disapproved by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal yesterday in a report submitted to the District Commissioners.

It is understood that the Commissioners will indorse Seal's report and condemn the bill. They disapproved it verbally when it was proposed to the House last year by Representative Reuben Wood (Democrat), Missouri.

Want Fight Films Legalized.

Other action taken by the District Government yesterday included:

1. The preparation by Counsel Seal of a bill to legalize showing motion pictures of prize fights in the District. Fight films were outlawed here by a Federal law enacted 26 years ago.

2. The drafting of an amendment to the District A. B. C. act which would reduce the liquor license fee paid by railroads and steamboat companies for their diners and lounge cars. The amendment provides that a railroad pay $100 annually for the privilege of serving liquor within the District and an additional $10 for each car in which liquor is sold. The present system calls for the payment of $20 per car.

3. The disclosure that the Commissioners will approve a bill proposed by Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, which would provide more adequate protection for workmen and the public during construction and repair of public buildings in the District.

Budget Bureau Hits Plan.

The Board of Public Welfare bill which Seal disapproved would authorize the Commissioners to appoint three board members for six-year terms. They would be paid annual salaries of $8,000 and would be empowered to name a secretary at a $5,000 salary. The present offices of director and assistant director of public welfare would be abolished.

The Budget Bureau already has told the Commissioners that it looks on the idea unfavorably.

In his report, Seal declared that the present unsalaried board is "working to the satisfaction of the informed members of the community and no valid criticism has been made of it."

The board is recognized, Seal said, as one of the "most progressive plans of public welfare administration in the country."

Banquet Surprises Charles Goldsmith, 'Inspecting' Jewish Home

Charles Goldsmith, retired merchant and philanthropist, was honor guest at a surprise party at the Jewish Home for the Aged last night.

Quite without Goldsmith suspecting he was to be feted, the board of directors of the institution, which he has headed for nine years, arranged a banquet to celebrate the tenth anniversary of his taking office—the first formal banquet ever held at the Home.

When Goldsmith was lured to the Home, ostensibly merely to inspect it, he found himself the center of an admiring group of his friends and their guests.

"I am too happy and surprised to really say what is exactly in my heart," said Goldsmith, as he surveyed two specially baked cakes and numerous tables full of well-wishers. "There is a lump in my throat, and I cannot say all I feel."

Among guests of honor who helped Goldsmith cut the cakes were Mrs. Goldsmith, Mr. and Mr. Herbert Willett, Rabbi and Mrs. Abram Simon and Rabbi Norman Gerstenberg.

The home has grown steadily since Goldsmith took the reins back in 1928. At that time there were only 45 inmates.

Chairman of the surprise banquet committee was Mrs. William Levy.

So glasses were lifted to Goldsmith's health, and he beamed, and auspiciously started another year as head of one of Washington's leading institutions.

You Needn't Worry About the Goose.

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla.

Goose Goslin—you remember him—is out of a job, but he is doing very nicely, thank you. He is currently wintering amid the glitter of Miami—has been for two months—and his style of living can be nicely covered for about 40 bucks a day. So the Goose, though jobless, is not exactly in want.

POVICH.

He was sacked by the Detroit club last fall when his outfielding was deemed no longer vital to the success of the Tigers, but the Goose is apparently unconcerned that, for the first season in 18 years, he will not be wearing the uniform of a big league ball club. He is managing to get along. When he headed South from his Salem, N. J., home in January, he took with him his sports wear, his golf sticks and a pair of scissors.

It's obvious enough why the Goose packed his summer wear and his golf sticks. Clothes have always been a passion with the big, broad-beamed fellow, who was not averse to dressing for breakfast, for lunch and for dinner at any excuse. And golf for years has been his second love. But the scissors—ah, there's a reason there, too. You see, the Goose needs 'em to clip his coupons.

Goose Well Fixed.

They'll never have to sling a benefit performance for the former Salem slugger. He's probably one of the wealthiest ballplayers of the generation. For 17 years he was in the big money—earned as high as $16,000 per annum—and never less than $10,000 since 1924. He has pocketed, roughly $35,000 in World Series cuts which has found its way into profitable stocks. His New Jersey farm is a show place.

He was saying the other day he didn't know if he'd take another baseball job. "There are a couple of offers that I might like, but they're in the National League. Somehow, I never cared for that league. I'll be leaving here, though, in a week, and I may catch on with an American League club. If I don't, my farm will always keep me busy."

He's 37 now, at the retiring age, but he thinks there are still a couple of years of baseball left in those bowed-legs. But he had hoped that by this time he'd be a big-league manager. He had his eyes on the Cleveland job last summer and was getting consideration for it when Alva Bradley finally decided to fire Steve O'Neill. But the Tigers nipped that little idea of Goslin's. Owner Walter O. Briggs wouldn't give him his release.

Score at Detroit.

"I'm sore at the Detroit club," said the Goose frankly. "You'd think after the time I spent in the league they'd give me a break if I could land a manager's job. And then, after the season closed, they let me go outright without any warning at all. That wouldn't have been so bad, except that they gave me my release a day after I had buried my father. That seemed kind of harsh to me."

He won't play in the minors, he was saying. It's tough enough to step down when a guy has to, he said, but luckily he didn't need a minor league salary. He wouldn't even take a job as the manager of a minor league club. Clark Griffith virtually offered him the job of managing Trenton in the Class A New York-Penn League. The Goose, a native New Jerseyite, would be an important figure at Trenton, Griffith reasoned. But Goslin said "No, thanks!"

"I'd like to play ball for Mr. Griffith again, but he hasn't offered me that kind of a job," recited the Goose. "Always got along well with Mr. Griffith. He always liked me. Bucky Harris, too. I always played good ball for Bucky; liked to play for him. Can't say the same about Joe Cronin. He and I never did gee. Cronin was all right, but he and I never saw eye-to-eye in baseball. That's why he traded me off."

A Break for Tigers.

Speaking of that little trade, Cronin did confound the baseball men when, at the end of the pennant-winning 1933 season he released Goslin to Detroit in exchange for Outfielder Johnny Stone. It was one of the few times in baseball history that a manager of a pennant-winning club ever disturbed his regular line-up in a deal.

The Goose didn't do badly at Detroit. No Washington team had been able to win a pennant without him, and it seemed that he had transferred his charm to the Tigers in 1934. Anyway, the Detroit club won its first pennant in 25 years and the next season they repeated. That was the year—1935—when the Goose broke up the World Series with the hit that won for the Tigers over the Cardinals.

It seems that Goslin did the Detroit club a distinct service during that 1934 season. The Tigers were floundering about a game and a half ahead of the Yankees in midseason, but unable to gain any ground. They needed another pitcher, Mickey Cochrane was shouting, but where to get him? Goslin knew. Al Crowder was on the market and at Goslin's insistence the Tigers bought him. Crowder, in the waning weeks of the year, proved the difference between first and second place.

Goose Astounded.

The Goose said he was astounded by the trade engineered by Mickey Cochrane with the White Sox last winter when they gave Gerald Walker and Marvin Owen for Vernon Kennedy, Tony Piet and Mike Tresh. "Mickey must have had a weak moment," said the Goose.

"Why, that Walker kept the

By Shirley Povich

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—Indications that the Messrs. Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris are not content to stand past on their 1938 Washington ball club, as currently constituted, are plentiful in the Nats camp here.

For the last two days Harris and Griffith have had their heads together in long conferences, and on several occasions the Nats' owner has been summoned to the long-distance telephone. Griffith responds with alacrity whenever paged by the hotel bellhops, and the suspicion is that he is in the throes of a deal, with another major league club.

The Nats' owner is seemingly unwilling to enter the 1938 race with his present staff, comprised of Rick Ferrell and two raw rookies. He is seeking to lay hands on another catcher, and is believed to be negotiating with the Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Cardinals.

May Buy Andrews.

But his quest for a pitcher has turned up the fact that the Cardinals are willing to dispose of a young right-handed pitcher and Griffith has evinced interest. The chap is Nathan Andrews, a former North Carolina University star, who impressed Bucky Harris in an exhibition game between the Nats and the Cardinals at Daytona Beach last season.

Andrews was with the Cardinals Rochester farm last season, winning 9 games and losing 13, but the Nats bosses envision him as a winner in the big leagues. He is on the waiver list and can be bought for $7,500.

Griffith was engaged in a long-distance telephone call to the Cardinals headquarters at St. Petersburg tonight and the name of Bob Weiland, big left-hander, was frequently mentioned. If the Cardinals demand no more than $7,500 for Weiland, he too, may be acquired by the Nats.

Bucky Harris today made the startling announcement that two rookies would be among his four starting pitchers next season and that Wes Ferrell was the only veteran certain of a regular role.

Chase, Krakauskas to Start.

"Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas will be in there taking a regular turn when the season starts," said Harris. "Wes Ferrell will be a regular, of course, but I don't know who my fourth starter will be. It is up to Jimmy DeShong, Monte Weaver and Pete Appleton to battle it out for that fourth starting job."

Thus did Harris seemingly promote Chase and Krakauskas ahead of the veteran DeShong, who has always been regarded as a certain regular in former seasons with the Nats. And when he placed the two rookie left-handers ahead of Monte Weaver, he gave them preference over the pitcher who last year had the best percentage of any hurler on the club.

"I know that," said Harris, "but if we are to get anywhere this year, the rookie pitchers will be responsible. They showed me enough potentialities last season to make me believe in them. One thing is certain, they both believe in themselves. Most rookies suffer from an inferiority complex, but not Chase and Krakauskas. They have that in their favor and don't forget they can throw hard."

The hitters in the Nat camp got a look at some better pitching today when Elon Hogsett, Jimmy DeShong, Joe Krakauskas, Pete Appleton and Monte Weaver took the mound. Wes Ferrell is the only veteran in camp who has not yet taken his turn pitching. He will make his mound debut tomorrow.

DeShong's loss of effectiveness last season Harris ascribed to his attempt to follow Ferrell's style of pitching. Ferrell was getting by nicely with slow stuff and DeShong, too, subordinated his fast ball to curves.

"He was pitching a lot of junk up there," said Harris, "until he found out he couldn't pitch without his fast ball. Ferrell can get away with the slow stuff, but not DeShong. When DeShong went back to his hard stuff he started winning again."

Al Simmons continued to batter the fences in batting practice. His young rival for an outfield job, George Case, is being vastly overshadowed by the veteran in the daily stick drills.

Harris, irked by young Jake Early's failure to hit the ball solidly, has altered the catcher's batting style. He is now facing the pitcher with his feet close together and striding into the ball a la Sam Rice—and getting results.

On Thursday, Harris will split his squad into halves and hold two workouts daily. The veterans will practice in the morning with the rookies taking the field in the afternoon. With nearly 40 ball players in camp, Harris has discovered that his squad is too unwieldy.

Hemsley Sent Home With 'Shiner'

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, March 8.—One eye closed tightly and the other narrowed to a slit, rollicking Rollie Hemsley, Cleveland Indian catcher, sat in his hotel room today in purple pajamas breathing the strains of "Sugar Blues" into a mouth organ.

Somewhere among his belongings was a one-way ticket home attached to a stern order from Manager Oscar Vitt to remain there until he mended his ways.

Rollie, acquired recently from the St. Louis Browns in an effort to bolster the Indian receiving staff, had no comment concerning his shiners, how they were acquired or what he intended to do about Vitt's order.

Manager Vitt, usually ready to discuss at length any baseball subject, was not eager today to talk about his catcher.

Only a couple of days ago Vitt spoke in the highest terms of the ability of his new mittman and said if Rollie behaved himself and if the gap at second base could be plugged, maybe the Indians would go places in the American League

It developed that Hemsley had made reform promises after Vitt had warned him about training violations before and after Mardi Gras.

The first slip, February 28, was described as "serious." The second, March 2, was minor.

"I told him after the first episode that I knew all about it," Vitt said. "I told him he was not getting away with anything."

Then came the real "blowout" today. After Hemsley failed to appear at Heinemann Park for practice, Vitt let it be known he had given the brilliant play-boy catcher transportation home.

"I sent him home until he sees fit to mend his ways," Vitt said. "I don't know anything about his black eye or any trouble he got into * * *."

The genial little manager expressed belief Rollie would "see the light" and be back with the team before the season opens.

"It's a long time until the season opens," he said, "and I think he'll mend his ways. If he doesn't there are plenty of catchers around. We have Pytlak, Taylor, Helf and I expect we could pick up someone if we had to. It's just another problem for the manager."

Cagers Seek Baseball Jobs

Maryland Squad Out for Varsity Diamond Team.

Coach Burt Shipley, who dismissed his Terrapin basketball team after returning from the Southern Conference tournament Saturday, stepped onto the Maryland baseball field yesterday, and met—of all things—his basketball team.

And, everything considered, the cagers promise to be better on the diamond than on the hardwoods. For no sooner had they jumped out of their shorts and jerseys and into sliding pads and spikes, Shipley envisioned a good team.

His two basketball forwards, Eddie Johnson and Waverly Wheeler, appear to be regulars on the baseball team, too, as do George "Dutch" Knepley, captain and stellar guard of the five. Pershing Mondorff, sophomore threeport man; Adam Bengoechea, and Charlie Norton, who was the team's leading scorer until he was benched because of ineligibility, were also on the scene.

Several batterymen and infielders had been working out indoors for several days and were joined Monday by the returning basketball players and other candidates. But yesterday, under the bright sun, was the first day Shipley had seen his prospects go through actual batting and fielding drills.

A shift that would send Mike (Moose) Surgent from second base to the outfield and bring Eddie (Choo-Choo) Johnson in from the outer garden to replace him on the keystone has been designed by the Terp coach over the winter and yesterday when the weather was ideal for it, he tried them out at their new posts.

"Eddie should be much better at second than Moose," Shipley said, "because of his snap throw that will aid us on double plays. But Surgent's batting power probably will win him an outfield berth."

Wheeler holds down third base nad Knepley plays first. Bengoechea is an infielder, while Mondorff, of field and golf fame, is a gardener. Norton, still ineligible, will work out with the pitchers.—GARRISON.

Hunterdon Wins At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, March 8 (AP).—Mrs. Ed Haughton's Hunterdon finally found a field he could beat at the Fair Grounds today.

After failing to finish in the money in five previous efforts this year, the 5-year-old chestnut gelding staged a strong finish to take the measure of five other claimers in the mile and a sixteenth feature. Although he had little to show for his recent races, Hunterdon was heavily backed in the mutuels, paying $6.20 for a $2 straight ticket.

D. J. Sullivan 3d's Chancing, a consistent money performer, took second money after being in front at the top of the stretch while third went to Short Skirt from the Sioux City stable.

Ahearn Promises Outdoor Fight to Victor—Turiello Still Goes Well in New York.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Enthusiastically flaunting a letter from Sam Pian in the face of innocent bystanders, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday announced that the winner of Monday night's Severio Turiello-Andre Jesserun bout will get a title shot at Welterweight Champion Barney Ross' crown this summer at the ball park.

"I got 'im, I got 'im," cried Herr Ahearn joyfully, referring to the epistle from Mr. Pian, who happens to do Ross' business. "I'm gonna give whoever wins Monday night's fight a bout with Ross at Griffith Stadium next summer. I can get Ross arright. This letter proves that."

We looked at the letter and it read something like this:

"Dear Goldie:

Glad to hear from you and learn that things are going okay in Washington. Ross is in great shape and visiting Hot Springs at present. I intend to start him fighting about the last of this month. He's got three fights booked and it looks like a busy season ahead . . . etc. . . . etc. Regards, SAM PIAN."

It didn't say anything about agreeing to bring Ross here for a fight, much less a title fight, or at least we didn't see anything like that. It could have been written between the lines, as Herr Ahearn inferred.

"Lissen, any time you get even an answer from these people," said he with a knowing look, "the fight's as good as in. He wants me to keep in touch with him. He don't have to worry about that, I will."

Ross fought here in 1935, opposing Phil Furr in a rousing scrap at the Stadium. It was a nontitle go and Ross won handily. If memory serves correctly he also predicted a rosey future for Furr after the bout.

Jessurun, meanwhile, received the local Boxing Commission's blessing in the guise of a letter from that body to the matchmaker, "suggesting" that the Frenchman would be a worthy opponent for any welterweight. I commented on his willingness to fight at the now defunct Rialto Club when the house was very small, also on his willingness to mix it in actual combat.

Turiello, meanwhile, continues to go at top speed in and around New York. Opponents are few and far between for the likeable Italian, who is building himself up for a title bout with Ross, Ceferino Garcia, allegedly a good, rough and eager fighter from the Coast, is headed for Australia after making a remark that nobody will fight him, which amused Signor Turiello very much. He offered to swap punches with the Filipino any time, any place—for nothing!

Bottomley Signed To Pilot Syracuse

Tampa, Fla., March 8 (AP).—"Sunny Jim" Bottomley, former member of the St. Louis Browns, was back in Florida today as manager of the Syracuse, N. Y., International League Club.

He said it was the first time he had been in a minor league uniform since 1922, and that it was "something like a homecoming to me I played for Syracuse the year before I broke into the big league."

He expects to play regularly with Syracuse.

Bayh Winner In Age Fight

Official Vote on Change Deadlocked, 5-5.

Birch E. Bayh's long fight to reduce the competitive age limit of high school athletes from 20 to 19 apparently reached a successful climax yesterday when a board of principals failed to gain a majority vote in a poll to support or change the ruling, The Post learned exclusively.

Meeting secretly with Bayh, director of the physical education department of the white public schools, and Dr. Henderson, holder of the same position in the colored school system, ten principals cast their ballots. The results showed 5 for and 5 against the 19-year-age limit, and so, since a majority vote is needed to change a Bayh ruling, the new limit is now definitely a rule.

Therefore any boy who reaches his nineteenth birthday before September 1, 1938, will be ineligible to participate in any public high school sport.

Thus, in two years, Bayh, who took over the local school system after occupying a similar position in Indiana, has whittled the age limit from 21 to the present 19. His fight hsa been far from an easy one, however, for he has been bitterly opposed at every turn by those who are against any innovation in high-school athletics.

The principals voting yesterday were Charles Hart, Eastern; John Paul Collins, Anacostia; L. G. Hoover, Central; Frank C. Daniels, Tech; M. P. Bradshaw, Roosevelt; Dr. S. Newton, Western; N. K. Nelson, Woodrow Wilson; G. D. Houston, Armstrong; W. L. Smith, Dunbar, and R. N. Mattingly, Cardozo.

Those in favor of the 20-year limit were Eastern, winner of the interhigh football and basketball championships; Central, Tech, Anacostia, which enters the public school competition this baseball season, and Armstrong. Opposed were Western and Roosevelt, co-runners-up for the court title; Woodrow Wilson, the "baby" of the interhigh schools, and Cardozo and Dunbar.

The deadlock which left the issue undecided in the minds of many school followers has ended an unceasing drive by powerful parties to defeat Bayh's latest innovation. Leaders in the movement were virtually all the interhigh coaches, who envisioned a decline of material with the younger age limit, and many influential organs such as school newspapers and the Central graduate and undergraduate "C" clubs.—MUNHALL.

D. C. School Fives Leave For Tourney

Eastern, St. Johns and Bethesda Teams to Vie at Lexington.

By Jack Munhall.

Eager to open basketball fire on outstanding opponents from six Southern States, a quartet of crack teams from the District and nearby Maryland are leaving today for Lexington, Va., to compete in the fourteenth annual South Atlantic scholastic tournament.

The tournament, sponsored by Washington and Lee University and embracing entries from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina and Georgia, opens tomorrow afternoon and continues through Saturday.

Yesterday three of the local colorbearers, Eastern, interhigh champion and runner-up in the Metropolitan tourney; Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Montgomery County titlist, and Briarley Military Academy, of Ammendale, Md., polished up their play in final drills.

St. John's, city champion and winner of 22 of 24 contests, enjoyed a deserved day of rest. The Johnnies, however, do not seem to need the extra practice, as witness their stirring triumph over Eastern in the Metropolitan finals the other night.

St. John's Confident.

St. John's officials, unperturbed over charges that the school team was favored by refereeing in the Eastern game, as stated in an afternoon paper, are confident that the Cadets will reflect further glory on the city in their latest test.

Three of the four squads plan to embark by auto this morning while Eastern leaves this evening by train. All will be housed and fed by fraternities on the W.-L. campus during their stay in Lexington.

Eastern's contingent of ten players, Coach Mike Kelly, and Manager A. H. Gregory, leave on the B. & O. Railroad at 6:01 p. m., arriving in the Virginia city at 10:45 p. m. The players scheduled to make the trip are the regular five of Clint Quantrille, Ralph Matera, Howard "Soup" Hancock, Russ Lombardy and Lee Lusby as well as John Stasui, Ray Holben, Lefty Bob Stockwell, Tony Catella and "Blondy" Cooksey.

Will Go By Auto.

St. John's, the only seeded team from this sector, will board several automobiles at approximately 9 o'clock this morning to depart from the school. Chaperoned by Brother Eadbert, the athletic director, and Coach Gene Augustefer, ten Johnnies are prepared to bring back the coveted title.

Besides the first five of Jim Giebel, Joe Gallagher, Johnny Swagart, Jim Mulvihill and Francis Battiste, a second team composed of Herbert Munhall, Frank Cody, Jesse Fogarty, Martin Hunt and "Ace" Burch will go along.

Briarly, which has earned the name of the "Lodge Academy" because of the exploits of the Lodge players and the team's coach, Capt. S. J. Lodge, will hie its boys southward about 9 o'clock a. m. The six-man team which has conquered 12 of 17 rivals, includes the Lodge brothers, Lee, Tom and Metcalf, and Bob Chichester, Charley Hodkin and Paul White, in addition to Papa Lodge.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, led by Coach Anthony Kupka, will get off sometime in the morning by auto, it is believed. The players who will represent the suburban school are Carroll Hayden, Louis Vannis, George Fuller, Will Morell, Pete Kimmel and Joe Sullivan.

D. C. Chances Good.

With four such outstanding quintets as the above participating in the tournament, Washington and its environs appears to have an excellent chance of claiming the tournament champion as their own. Both Eastern and St. John's are sending teams which are capable of holding their heads high in any company and Bethesda and Briarley are also unusually strong.

Bethesda, however, has drawn the fourth-seeded team in the opening round and its early elimination is not unlikely. The Marylanders are slated to face Lanier High School, of Virginia, in the second game of the opening day program at 3:30 p. m.

Briarley is next to see action, meeting Stanton Military Academy, of Virginia, at 4:40 p. m. Eastern and St. John's play in the evening, both against formidable foes. The Johnnies engage Asheville (N. C.) High School, while the Lincoln Park boys clash with Monroe A. & M., of Maron, Ga.

Seedings place Massanutten as the favored team, with Durham (N. C.) High, St. John's and Lanier following in that order.

Pairings for the opening round:

1:30 p. m., Durham High vs. Fork Union; 2:30 p. m., Lanier High vs. Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, of Bethesda, Md.; 3:30 p. m., Spartanburg, S. C., High vs. the as yet unselected Virginia High school team; 4:30 p. m., Staunton Military Academy vs. Brierley Military Academy, of Ammendale, Md.; 7 p. m., St. John's vs. Asheville, N. C., High; 8 p. m., Massanutten vs. Greenbrier Military Academy, of West Virginia; 9 p. m., Eastern High, of Washington, vs. Monroe Aggies, of Monroe, Ga.; 10 p. m., Danville, Va., High vs. Due West, S. C., High.

Favored Duo Is Eliminated

Handball Tourney Passes First Round at Y.

One ranking local doubles team was eliminated and another moved easily into the second round as a result of last night's first round doubles play in the Junior National A. A. U. handball tourney on the Y. M. C. A. courts.

The George Wendlandt-Ellis Klein combine furnished the lone upset to date when they smashed their way to a decisive 21-8, 21-15 victory over Walter Englehardt and Artie Wondrack, the District's No. 2 team. Randy Myers and George Newman met little difficulty on their way to a 21-15, 21-8 win over the J. B. Payne-H. Merman duo.

Jack Schwartz, District champion, will see action for the first time tonight when he faces Walter Englehardt in the opening second-round match at 7:30 p. m. Walter Plekan, Buffalo Y. M. C. A. entry who scored such an impressive first-round victory Monday night, will meet the veteran John Payne, local "Y" entry at 8:30 p. m.

A. H. Blum, of the Baltimore Y. M. H. A., and Edward Linz, New York A. C. entry, will also see action for the first time tonight. Blum meets Isadore Levinson, Philadelphia Broadwood A. C. entry, at 8:30 o'clock in what promises to be the feature match of the night. Linz will make his first appearance before local fans at 9:30 o'clock, when he meets George Wendlandt, ranking local player who upset Gustave Goldstein in his first match and is capable of thoroughly testing the mettle of the New York entry.

Yank Owner Makes Final Offer to Ace

Issues Ultimatum to Joe DiMaggio to Take $25,000 or Quit.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, March 8.—Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the world champion New York Yankees, today issued his five-star-final ultimatum to holdouts Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio.

He confirmed a boost from $36,000 to $39,000 in the 1938 contract terms offered Gehrig, who turned down the biggest stipend the colonel has ever offered to one of his players, with the exception of Babe Ruth. The $25,000 offered DiMaggio is his limit, Ruppert added.

"I went more than half way with Gehrig," said the Yankee owner. "That's absolutely as far as I will go. He came to see me and said he would sign for $40,000. I offered him $39,000. He turned it down. We shook hands. That's all."

Gehrig Silent.

Gehrig conferred with Ruppert at the latter's brewery yesterday, then went into seclusion without hinting what his next move would be. The slugger's friends have an idea he has delayed signing, not because of dissatisfaction with the Yankee terms but to make sure he tops DiMaggio on the pay roll. On the basis of Ruppert's flat declaration today, however, Gehrig need have no apprehension.

"DiMaggio can stay home if he doesn't want to play ball for $25,000," declared Ruppert.

The Yankees haven't heard from their outfield star since he repeated his original refusal to accept the $10,000 increase offered and demanded a $40,000 salary for this year.

Tired of Wrangling.

"I'm tired of all this dilly-dallying," added Ruppert. "All things considered, I think I have been reasonable. Here are two fellows who say they do not want to play ball for a total of $64,000, for one season. What are things coming to?"

Ruppert had hoped to solve his holdout problems before going South to visit the Yankee training camp. He plans to leave next week for St. Petersburg, Fla.

When finally corralled Gehrig made it clear his salary ideas were not based on what DiMaggio or any other players wanted.

"I honestly think I'm entitled to a $40,000 contract," said Lou. "It's always been my ambition to get into that class and now's the time if I am ever going to get it. I had a good year in 1937 and I hope to have an even better one this season."

Gehrig played a "two gun" role in the movies this winter, but he grinned a denial that he's trying to use hold-up tactics on his employer.

"The colonel and I parted on good terms," said Lou, "but I don't know when we will get together again."

48 Boys Box Here Tonight

Junior Golden Gloves to Vie in Semifinals.

Paced by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club's first team, which qualified 14 youths in preliminary bouts, a field of 48 prospective ring champions moves into the semifinal round of the annual Junior Golden Gloves boxing tournament tonight at the Merrick Boys Club. The first bout is scheduled for 7 p. m.

Georgetown Boys Club, defending its team championship, placed only eight men in the semifinals, and appears to have only an outside chance, at best, of retaining its crown.

One change in pairings was necessitated last night by the disqualification of Geoge Coakley, 122-pounder, who was barred for being over the age limit. Claude Welch, whom he eliminated in a previous bout, will replace him, meeting Smitty Hill.

Brainard Weds On $1; Griffith Thinks He's Tops

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—On the plea that he owed a $14 board bill, young Dan Brainard, rookie pitcher, the other day wrung a $15 salary advance from President Clark Griffith, of the Washington club.

That afternoon Brainard journeyed to Sanford, Fla., 20 miles away, and took unto himself a wife in a speedy ceremony.

The news of the rookie's matrimonial venture leaked out and Griffith congratulated the young pitcher.

"Son, you're the greatest optimist I've ever known," he told Brainard. "Anybody who can start ut in married life with one buck as working capital deserves a chance to make good. Get in there and pitch now, and you'll make a nice living.

D. C. Boxing Commission Will Decline to Accept Resignation of Referee Denny Hughes

By Lewis F. Atchison.

At an early hour this morning Paul E. Haworth, member of the District Boxing Commission, said that he had talked with Hughes and ironed out their difficulties. Hughes, he said, agreed to withdraw his resignation as a referee. "Anything I said at the ringside Monday night," Haworth said, "was not meant as criticism. The commission is 100 per cent behind its referees, physicians, and other officials."

Denny Hughes' resignation as a referee will not be accepted by the District of Columbia Boxing Commission, a poll of the members of that body revealed last night unless, of course, he insists on it.

The popular arbiter submitted his resignation in a turgid epistle to the governing body, claiming that he had been publicly criticised by a member of the commission, Paul E. Haworth, for awarding Joey Archibald a technical knockout over Johnny Mirabella in the ninth round of their bout Monday night at the Arena.

Haworth expressed regret at Hughes' action, denying that he had critised the referee's action, publicly or privately.

"I went into the dressing room merely to tell Denny that he would be paid for refereeing the main bout as well as the preliminaries," Haworth said. "Dempsey was supposed to work the final bout, but couldn't, and also we called on Danny.

"I remarked that Mirabella appeared to be in pretty bad shape when she stopped the bout, and he agreed that he was. There is not a word of truth in the report that I criticised his work. I have only the highest regard for Denny, and consider him a capable and efficient referee. This is all a mistake, and I intend to see him and get it straightened out.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the commission, was stunned by the action of Hughes, a local attorney and first man licensed as a referee following the legalization of boxing here in 1934. Brown was conversing with a group in his office when the letter arrived by messenger late in the afternoon, and was praising Hughes' ability when apprised of his resignation.

"I had hoped to get Denny to withdraw it," he commented, "but was unable to communicate with him. I'll talk to him in the morning and see if he will not agree to withdraw it. Personally, I think Denny is an excellent official.

"I happened to be in a favorable

Miller and March Vie in Track Meet at C. U.

If Eddie Miller, Maryland high-jumper, played tournament tennis, his numerous meetings with Harry March, North Carolina University athlete, may have produced different results. But in the high jump, Miller's the master.

At least, that's always been the case in the past, and that's why Miller is the favorite to win the event in the Catholic University Indoor Games, in which nearly 400 athletes from leading Southern and Eastern colleges will participate, Saturday.

Miller and March, both local boys, went through four years of high school track competition with Miller, always managing to outjump his red-haired opponent. Miller represented Eastern and March jumped for Tech.

Harry is some shucks as a tennis player, holding the D. C. junior championship and possessing one of the hardest services in the locality. Saturday night, however, these things can't help him. But he's still got a pair of well-built, springy legs with which to again try to best the Terp. And that's what tends to make the clash interesting.

Miller has touched 6 feet 4 inches. He won at Richmond last year outdoors with a leap of 6 feet 3½ inches. He recently won the Southern Conference championship at the indoor meet at Chapel Hill when he beat March for the honor.

He was defeated but once last year, in the first meet against Dartmouth. Afterward, he won nine consecutive dual meets and the outdoor Southern Conference title, which he took with a leap of 6 feet 1½ inches.

March was second to Miller in the outdoor games last year, also, and has jumped 6 feet 1 inch, but has never been able to beat his adversary.

Dorsey Griffith, chairman of the games, announced last night that 28 events have been listed for the meet scheduled for 7:30 p. m. Tickets are on sale at Spaulding's and C. U.'s gym. Price range from $1, general admission, to $1.65 for reserved seats.

Michigan Names Oosterbann Head Basketball Coach

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 8 (AP). The University of Michigan announced today appointment of Bennie Oosterbaan, one of the greatest athletes in the institution's history, as head basketball coach to succeed Franklin C. Cappon.

Cappon's appointment as head basketball coach and assistant football coach of Princeton University was announced last night.

Oosterbaan will continue as an assistant football coach at Michigan and will have charge of the freshman baseball team. He has been on the Wolverine staff since 1928.

A decade ago Oosterbaan completed at Michigan a career in football, basketball and baseball in which he won three varsity letters in each of the three sports, played on six Big Ten championship teams, and was considered one of the Nation's outstanding ends in football.

position to note Mirabella's condition when the fight was stopped, and believe Denny was absolutely right in stopping it when he did."

Commissioner Claude W. Owen could not be reached, but Brown said he had telephoned him and found him to be of the opinion that the resignation should not be accepted. If Hughes persists, however, it will be another matter.

Hughes went to great length in his letter to point out that loyalty is a great virtue, "one of the few that I claim to possess," and hesitated to direct criticism at anyone connected with the commission. He accused Haworth of "broadcasting" criticism of his work, when he should have discussed the matter "with the official involved." He also claimed Haworth turned and walked out on him when he tried to show how badly Mirabella was beaten.

I know. I've played leftfield behind some pretty good third basemen in my time, including Ossie Bluege, and Owen is still the best of the lot after Bluege. When those base hits start rocketing past third next season, they'll appreciate that Owen."

Your correspondent wished to know some more about the Tigers, particularly about Schoolboy Rowe and his ailing arm, but at that point a uniformed porter approached and announced, "Mr. Goslin, your car waits without."

"Not without gas, I hope," cracked the Goose, and he said he'd be seeing me.

Judge to Call Candidates Today

Joe Judge, former Nat and now coach of the Georgetown University baseball team, will start his candidates to work tomorrow when he issues first call for pitchers and catchers.

Indoor workouts, to be held in the Ryan gym, for the 1938 season which promises to be as successful as last year's undefeated one, will be held until outdoor temperature permits the squad to move onto the diamond.

Only battery candidates will be expected to report to practice this week while candidates for the outfield and infield will not be called until the team moves outdoors.

Giants' Pilot Says Nowak Lured Away

Rookie Infielder Found in Cleveland Camp; Storm Breaks.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., March 8. There's skullduggery afoot in the training camps over a fine feud coming up between the New York Giants and Cleveland Indians, all over a kid second baseman named Bill Nowak.

The Indians, Col. Bill Terry of the Giants charges, have absconded with Nowak and are holding him in the palatial Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, headquarters of the late Huey Long.

The Indians, represented by their road secretary, Frank Kohlbecker, came over before dawn today and spirited Nowak out of his boarding house here, claims Terry, who feels that they are trying to dazzle the youngster with big-town surroundings.

Nowak Disappears.

These facts are known: Nowak was here yesterday, he didn't report for practice here today, and the clerk of the New Orleans hostelry admitted Nowak had been his guest since "some time this morning." That Kohlbecker was implicated remains to be proved.

The two clubs have been scrapping over Nowalk for several weeks, with Business Manager Cyril Slapnicka, of Cleveland, dashing off stinging telegrams to Terry, and Terry only grinning, because he thought he had Nowak.

Now the the whole thing will have to be threshed out before Judge William Branham, czar of the minor leagues, with an ultimate prospect that Cleveland will come out behind the eight ball.

It's another of those involved baseball brainstorms. Nowak, a husky, hard-hitting youngster not yet of age, was spied by a Cleveland scout last summer playing semi-pro ball in eDtroit. Slapnicka signed him for Springfield, Ohio, Cleveland's ally in the Middle Atlantic League, but forgot to file the contract with Judge Branham.

Showed Up at School.

Nowak seems to have forgotten about it, too, for he showed up at the Giants' baseball school here last month under the name of Bill Wayne. He looked so good that with the school disbanded he was chosen along with five other students to report to the Giants' camp.

Terry offered him a contract with Jersey City, the Giants' farm. Nowak broke down, told Terry his right name and said he thought maybe he belonged to Cleveland. Terry looked into the matter, found that he rookie was, officially, free as the wind. So he signed him, and this time there was no forgetting to notify Judge Bramham.

And that was how matters stood until Nowak disappeared today.

Cleveland Club Officers Express Surprise.

New Orleans, March 8 (AP).—Cleveland Indians club officials expressed astonishment tonight that Bill Terry and his New York Giants were all worked up over the fact a rookie second baseman named Bill Nowak suddenly shifted his spring training from Baton Rouge to New Orleans.

News that Manager Terry had charged the Indians had spirited Nowak away from the Giants' Baton Rouge camp, produced a terse statement from the Indians' road secretary, Frank Kohlbecker, and a "so-what" attitude from Manager Oscar Vitt.

Terry said Kohlbecker went to Baton Rouge last night and induced Nowak to return to the Cleveland camp here.

"I did not leave New Orleans last night and was nowhere near Baton Rouge," Kohlbecker said. "Other than that I have no comment."

"All I know is that the boy (Nowak) is over here training with us," Manager Vitt said. "I don't know what's coming off here and guess I will have to see my old friend Terrible Will personally.

"It is my understanding that Nowak's our property. If he wasn't he wouldn't be working out with us. I didn't go to Baton Rouge last night and as far as I know no other member of the Cleveland club went."

Yale, Harvard Meet.

New York, March 8 (AP).—The Eastern Intercollegiate League swimming title probably will be settled Saturday when Harvard and Yale, both unbeaten, meet at New Haven. Last year Harvard won to oust Yale from the top of the standings for the first time in years.

Patty Victor At Belleair

Minneapolis Girl Back in Top Form.

By the Associated Press.

Belleair, Fla., March 8.—Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, stepped back into a winning stride today and advanced to the second round of the Belleair women's golf tournament with a convincing 8-and-6 decision over Mrs. Mark McGarry, of St. Petersburg.

Victorious in the first four events she entered this winter, Miss Berg won 13 consecutive matches before she was stopped in the first round of the Florida east coast tournament at St. Augustine last week by Jane Cothran Jameson, of West Palm Beach.

To win the Belleair tournament and make it five out of six, red-haired Patty must survive a field including not only the touring group of top-notch women players, but also Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, six times the national champion.

Mrs. Vare Wins.

Mrs. Vare, playing in her second tournament of the season, trounced Mrs. Charles Newbold, of Wichita, Kans., 5 and 3, today and went into the second round against Sally Guth, of Webster Groves, Mo. Miss Guth was the surprise 1-up victor over Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Jameson got revenge for the finals defeat she suffered at the hands of Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., at St. Augustine. She turned back Miss Hemphill, one of the favorites, 3 and 2.

The medalist, Marion Miley, of Fort Pierce, Fla., defeated Frances Hadfield, of St. Petersburg, 3 and 2, and will play Mrs. Jameson tomorrow.

Doi Training Victor.

Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, winner here last year, was the 5 and 3 victor over Virginia Guilfoil, of Syracuse, N.Y. She faces Miss Berg tomorrow.

The other quarter-finals engagement tomorrow will pit Marion McDougall, of Portland, Oreg., 3 and 1 victor over Helen Detweiller, of Washington, against Bernice Wall, of Oshkosh, Wis., who downed Mrs. J. J. Lawlor, of New York, 2 and 1.

Declare Danville School Cage Victor

Richmond, Va., March 8 (AP).—Washington High School, of Danville, was declared winner today of the western Virginia class A basketball championship.

The award was made by a subcommittee of the Virginia High School Athletic and Literary League's executive committee.

The Danville school was defeated by Jefferson High, of Roanoke, 41 to 39, in a five-extra-period game. However, the subcommittee upheld a ruling by the district committee that a conference rule had been violated when the game proceeded past an overtime period in which the Danville team was in the lead.

Gene Ruark Wins 3-Cushion Title in Matches at Royal

Eugene Ruark won the District of Columbia 3-cushion billiard championship last night, defeating Doc Hall, 35-29, in 58 innings at the Royal Billiard Academy. The match consumed an hour and 20 minutes.

Playing before the largest crowd to witness a match this season, both players appeared nervous and bungled many shots that they usually do not miss.

By his victory Ruark finished a remarkable stretch of shootnig in which he has captured every match since the tournament opened in December.

The following players share in the honors: Doc Hall and D. Stadland, the runnerups; Harry Baer and Gene Flynn, who tied for third and Jerry Crowder, the fourth man.

Sally Miller Elected Tennis League Head

At the annual business meeting of the Women's Tennis League of the District of Columbia, the following officers were elected: President, Miss Sally Miller; first vice president, Mrs. Edna Vest; second vice president, Mrs. Dorette Miller; secretary-treasurer, Miss Katharine Wassman. The opening date for this season's play was set for May 1, and the teams are now in the process of organization for an enthusiastic start.

Non-members interested in participating in the tennis matches of the Women's League this season should get in touch immediately with Sally Miller, Metropolitan 4985.

Johnson Tops Entries.

New York, March 8 (AP).—Ben Johnson, who led Columbia to the I. C. A. A. A. A. title last Saturday, and Allan Tolmich, of Wayne University, head their respective fields in the sprint and hurdles in the Knights of Columbus indoor track and field meet at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Preview of Post-A. A. U. Cage Teams Is Scheduled Tonight

A preview of possible finalists in the unlimited division of the Post-A. A. U. basketball championships tournament, which opens on the Tech and Roosevelt High School floors on March 17, may be seen this week at Heurich gym as five of the leading contenders engage in tune-up games.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, Bureau of Investigation, runner-up in the Heurich Cup League championships, meets the powerful Senate Beer, 145-pound titlists in The Post event last season. And at 9 o'clock Regal, champion of the Heurich League, engages Delaware & Hudson, which upset Senate, 42-28, last Sunday.

Joining this quartet of familiar teams is W. W. Chambers, a strong aggregation of former prep and collegiate stars, which was recently organized. The Undertakers, however, have acquired quite a reputation by bumping off many of the city's leading sandlot outfits.

On the rosters of these five outstanding unlimited competitors are many former high school stars and there are a few collegiate greats. Senate has a star-studded lineup which includes Bill Mitchell, the city's leading scorer when with Wilson Teachers College; Gerald Burns, formerly of Western; Hop Lomax, Western All-High choice last year; Huck Cavanaugh, a Roosevelt luminary; Fred Scheele, one of the greatest players ever to attend St. John's Prep; Chick Hollidge, twice an All-High player at Eastern, and George Beach, a veteran of sandlot play.

Delaware & Hudson also has man boys whose court exploits are a byword with local fans. Among these are Milt Genderson, an exceptionally clever ball-handler, who saw service with the Georgetown frosh a couple of years ago; Knocky Thomas, a Maryland University product; Donald Fones, another All-High player from Central; Milton Goss, a towering center, and Bernie Cogar, for years an outstanding performer.

F. B. I.'s collection of stars is pretty well known, for reams have been written of them. To review their names, however, there are the Thompson brothers, Herb and Jimmy, two of Western's best-remembered stars; Lavelle Dean, the unmatchable one from Eastern; Forrest Burgess, one-time Central player, and many others.

Detton Eyes Title Chance

For Champion to Meet Indian Thursday.

Aiming for a championship bout with Bronko Nagurski, Dean Detton, former Utah State football star, grapples with Chief Thunderbird tomorrow night at Turner's Arena in the feature bout of an attractive program.

Former world's champion and still rated one of the best on the circuit, Detton lost his crown last June to the same Nagurski at Minneapolis, and was unsuccessful in an attempt to regain it in a return match at Los Angeles a few months later. Fifteen thousand fans sat in on the second bout.

Detton appears to have his heart set on recapturing the crown, but if Nagurski's last performance here was a criterion of his true ability the Salt Lake City boy's task is cut out for him. Thunderbird, as a matter of fact, will not exactly be a push-over for him, inasmuch as the chief proved himself a tough customer in several previous fights.

The Chief, who enters the ring in full Indian regalia and throws a couple of war-dances and whoops into the match for good measure, has a string of nine consecutive victories to his credit. Detton may snap the chain, unless it is the Indian who is scheduled to get the shot at Nagurski.

Armstrong, Ross to Meet In Title Bout

Coast Featherweight to Seek Welter Crown Next May 26.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 8.—Fistic Czar Mkie Jacobs stopped playing around with his menagerie of heavyweights long enough to day to name a world's welterweight title match between Champion Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong, the Los Angeles colored boxing sensation and featherweight champion, for May 26.

Sam Pain, one of Ross' managers, and Eddie Mead, who pilots Armstrong, agreed to terms over long-distance telephone. They'll sign articles March 29 the day before Armstrong is booked to fight Lew Feldman, of Brooklyn, in the Hippodrome.

Jacobs said he'll stage the show either in the Yankee Stadium or Madison Square Garden's Long Island City bowl. Terms will be announced when the contracts are signed.

Armstrong has agreed to meet Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers within 30 days after the Ross about. Ambers will be out of commission for the next six weeks because of a recent operation on his nose.

Although he has been campaigning successfully in the lightweight division since knocking out Petey Sarron for the featherweight crown last October, Armstrong never has scaled more than 134½ pounds for any of his fights. To partly offset the weight advantage Ross will hold, the welter champ has agreed to come in at 142 pounds against the Negro. This is 5 pounds under the welterweight limit.

Ross, now in New York, will go to Chicago next week to confer with his managers on two or three tune-up engagements. Barney hasn't fought since he successfully defended his crown against Ceferino Garcia in the "Carnival of Champions" last September.

Al Weill, who piloted Ambers to the 135-pound title, resigned today as matchmaker for the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, effective April 1, to resume his career as a manager of boxers. When he sold Ambers' contract to Charlie Goldman last fall it was with the understanding he could buy it back if he left the matchmaking post. No successor to Weill as Twentieth Century matchmaker has been selected.

By the Associated Press.

The Reds, announced the signing of Eddie Roush, former Reds' outfielder, as coach to assist Manager Bill McKechnie and Head Coach Gowdy. Roush will report to the team Sunday.

Sarasota, Fla., March 8 (AP).—With the exception of four players, three of whom are en route and the fourth—Infielder Eric McNair—who is a holdout, the Boston Red Sox engaged in a double session of training today.

Southpaw Pitcher Archie McKain signed his contract this morning, while McNair has stubbornly refused terms.

Joe Vosmik, acquired from the Browns, donned a Boston uniform for the first time today.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Decided after a week and a half of practice that the New York Yankees are ready to begin intracamp games, Manager Joe McCarthy today named his pitchers for the first tilt tomorrow. The first infield practice was held today with Babe Dahlgren at first, Joe Gordon at second, Frank Crosetti at short and Red Rolfe at third. Bill Knickerbocker filled in at both second and third.

Baton Rouge, La., March 8 (AP).—Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Giants, decided today that he wouldn't likely confer with holdout Dick Bartell before Thursday and that he would pitch Carl Hubbell in Sunday's exhibition game against the Phillies.

Bartell, due late tonight, is not scheduled to accompany the Giants to Biloxi for tomorrow's clash with the Phillies.

Bradenton, Fla., March 8 (AP).—The Boston Bees took part in their lengthiest workout of the spring training season today.

Two of the three absentees, Harl Maggert and Rabbit Warstler, arrived in Camp and reported themselves delay at Jacksonville.

Infielder Joe Walsh, limping slightly from a knee injury which threatened to force his return home for treatment, worked out for the first time in a week.

Quincy Easy Winner Of Tropical Feature; Pays Backers $18.50

Bromley Gelding Scores Over Indomitable in Santa Rosa Purse by Three Lengths; Shining-sun Takes Show Money.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 8.—Running for the first time in the read and black silks of C. S. Bromley, Philadelphia sportsman, Quincy today won the featured Santa Rosa Purse before another good sized crowd. The 4-year-old Teddy gelding, recently acquired from the Shandon Farm, had not been victorious since last June, but he found his racing legs this time and breezed home by three lengths to return the lucrative odds of $18.50 for $2. His time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:45 4-5.

The Paragon Stable's Indomitable, favorite in the field of six smart platers, held on to be an easy second, another three lengths clear of Longchamps Farm's Shining Sun. Boston Pal, Pompeys Pillar and Tugboat Frank brought up the rear.

Under hard riding Eddie Arcaro, Indomitable made a courageous effort for the talent. He was taken to the front soon after a good start but could not race into the clear. Shining Sun and then Boston Pal made his journey a strenuous one. Finally, having disposed of that pair, Indomitable was forced to withstand the strong challenge of Quincy in the last quarter mile. Taking command at the home turn under Irving Anderson, Quincy easily increased his margin in the run to the wire.

Lady Hav Pays $6.20.

Maiden 2-year-old platers provided the sport in the half mile curtain raiser on today's program. Lady Hav, a filly with several promising efforts at Hialeah behind her, was installed favorite at $6.20 for $2. The daughter of Westwick made good in decisive fashion. Jimmy Lynch broke the chestnut lassie on her toes from the inside and the combination never was in serious danger, scoring by a length and a half in :48 4-5. Darby Dean, always well up, closed steadily to finish second, a similar margin before Ample.

In a thrilling finish that saw three horses heads apart, Lucky Jean, in the silks of W. V. Dwyer, managing director of the Gables track, drove to victory after making all her own pace under Eddie Arcaro. Happy Nymph, the outside horse, was second, while the heavily backed Scottish Mary was third.

Hartle Suspended.

Apprentice C. Hartle, who rode Happy Nymph to the place in the second race, drew a 10-day suspension from the stewards for rough riding. The boy's mount appeared to impede the favored Scottish Mary in the drive home.

After consistently finishing close up, the veteran Miney Myerson broke the jinx and won the third race. The 8-year-old gelding showed admirable tenacity by holding a narrow advantage all the way. He first disposed of High Image, then stood off Chancery's stretch bid and beat that fellow by a head to pay the talent $4.60. Miss Webb was third, two lengths behind.

Didutellus and Pine Frills, second and first choices, respectively, made a two-horse race out of the fourth, the former earning a photo decision by a nose. My Wo was beaten four lengths while finishing third. The new mile and 60 yards distance was used for the first time in this event. It has taken the place of mile races, which were started too near to the first turn and therefore were conducive to crowding.

Returns $6.80 Ticket.

Pine Frills rushed to the front, but was quickly joined by Didutellus. The pair left the remainder of the field struggling lengths behind. Johnny Longden pushed the Sun Beau filly's nose in front right on the wire to return $6.80. The time was 1:46.

The three horses that drew most of the play accounted for the payoff positions in the 6-furlong sixth contest. In a photo duel, Noble Boy was awarded the purse over Sun Antioch, with Rebekah two lengths behind. The latter, favorite, was used up racing Moon Harvest into early defeat and then having to cope with Noble Boy. Sun Antioch loomed on the inside in the last furlong and barely failed to catch the camera's eye. Noble Boy paid $8.70.

Despite the fact that he won his last start, Prince Dean was allowed to go postward at better than 20 to 1 in the seventh race of 1 1-16 miles. The gelding lacked early foot, but gradually worked his way up and reached the wire in time to win by a head from Inscription, the choice. The latter was a factor all the way and held on gamely to save second money by a half length from the poorly handled RFitz Brothers.

Ralph Eccard scored a double by booting Sun Way, $25.90, to a half-length victory over Centennial in the last race. Starwick was third.

Textile Fiber Consumption At 9-Year High

Cotton, by Weight, Set New All-Time Record Last Year.

New York, March 8.—The total value of textile fibers consumed in the Uunted States in 1937 aggregated $1.084,600,000, the highest annual value reached for any year since 1929, according to figures compiled by the Textile Economics Bureau today. The total was $5,000,000, more than the previous recovery high for 1936. The annual value of fiber consumption in the United States follows (units are millions of dollars):

	1937	1932	1929
Cotton	417.5	157.7	653.7
Wool	357.4	105.8	357.1
Rayon	186.9	102.5	166.8
Silk	99.7	110.6	400.8
Linen	23.1	9.4	*
Total	1.084 6	486.0	1,578.4

The value of raw wool consumed in 1937 exceeded the 1929 figure by $300,000. This is the first time that the value of one of the three major natural fibers has exceeded its 1929 level. This figure represents the average annual wool price since 1928.

The 1937 value of silk consumed in the United States represented a decline of $2,000,000 from 1936 and was the third lowest annual value for silk since 1920. The value of linen consumed in 1937 reached a new eight-year high of $23,000,000.

Rayon consumption valued at $187,000,000 for 1937 was the second largest total on record for the industry, and was exceeded only by the record of $190,000,000 in 1936.

Franc Topples To 10-Year Low

Paris, March 8 (AP).—The franc closed today at 31.10 to the dollar, the lowest closing in more than a decade, despite having rallied in afternoon trading from a bottom of 31.15.

The fall of the franc was blamed in financial quarters on a number of developments in French economy. They ranged from recent published figures showing a trade deficit of 1,900,000,000 francs (about $61,900,000) during February, to the government's battle with Parliament over labor legislation.

Financial sources said the stabilization fund withdrew during the morning, but returned to the market at the end of the day with light purchases of francs.

Mill Buying, Export Sales, Lift Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 8.—Bulges of a cent a bushel in Chicago wheat prices today formed the outcome of numerous irregular changes that included an abrupt tumble with securities.

Liberal buying of wheat futures developed on the part of milling interests and exporters when the Chicago wheat market, jolted from downturns of securities, fell to fresh low levels unreached heretofore in 1938. At this stage, with prices down about a cent overnight, recoveries got under way, and virtually the day's top quotations for wheat were current as dealings came to an end.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish, May 90⅛@90¼, July 85½@85⅝, corn ⅛-⅜ up, May 59⅛@59¼, July 61, oats ⅛-⅜ advanced, rye showing ¼-½ gain, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to an equal lift.

Gen. Motors Total Sales Are Ahead of Last Year

New York, March 8 (AP).—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks to consumers in the United States in February amounted to 62,831 units, compared with 63,069 in January and 51,600 in February, 1937. Sales to dealers in the United States in February were 63,771 units, compared with 56,938 in January and 49,674 in February, 1937.

Total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada plus overseas shipment were 94,449 units, compared with 94,267 in January and 74,567 in February last year.

For the first two months sales to consumers in the United States totaled 125,900 units, compared with 144,598 in the like period of 1937. Sales to dealers in the United States for the first two months amounted to 120,209 units, against 120,575 in 1937. World sales totaled 188,716, against 178,235 in 1937.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively.
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Improve in Late Trading After Early Decline; Bonds Lower; Francs Tumble.

New York, March 8.—Commodities were mixed, United States Government bonds were a shade lower, and stocks for the sixth successive day declined fractions to a point or more in active divisions. Sales volume in stocks again was small. May wheat closed five-eighths of a cent higher at 90⅛ cents a bushel.

Stocks opened slightly lower and declined rather sharply immediately after the announcement of the suspension of Richard Whitney & Co. from the Stock Exchange and the Curb Exchange. The market's first reaction to the news was that, since the cause for suspension was failure to meet financial obligations, many other firms must be in difficulty. The prominence of the Whitney firm supported that view, which later was greatly diluted through the realization that charges of special dealings in violation of the rules probably explained the firm's suspension.

The Whitney incident at least focused attention upon the market's position, which, in turn, meant the position of business, and the outlook on that side did not seem particularly rosy. No great amount of liquidation was brought out, and the morning low prices proved to be the worst of the day. A tendency to harden somewhat developed in the last hour of trading.

In addition to the upset on the home front caused by the failure of a leading stock exchange firm, the rapid approach of another crisis in France had a disturbing effect, for it emphasized the point that the whole world is far from perfect economic and financial health. Moreover, politics is mixed so thoroughly with economics in nearly all countries that it is difficult to predict the outcome. French francs sold at the lowest price since November, 1926, not long before the return of the franc to gold under the Poincare regime. France continues to pay heavily for the privilege of instituting broad social "reforms," giving an inflexibility to manufacturing costs and greatly lifting the cost of living, during a time of slack business and the operation of the government on a huge yearly deficit basis.

Business News.

Meanwhile business news contained rather more bad items than good ones. Dividends were cut or omitted by a number of companies, including the Western Electric subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. It is now certain that the profits accounts for first quarter, for industrial as well as railroad corporations, are going to make sorry reading. A long list of deficits will be shown, and the number of businesses that will show as much money made in the current period as was made in the same months of last year will be few. Perhaps, as some observers feel, the stock market last autumn made allowance for all that; what is now worrying investors is whether the future has been sufficiently discounted. It is high time that signs of at least seasonal improvement were being shown.

General Motors.

The sales report for February released by General Motors around noon was considerably better than might have been expected from the gloomy reports made concerning the motor industry. Sales to consumers in this country were about 20 per cent greater than for the same month of last year, and were only slightly lower than for January. The comparison with a year ago probably looks better than actual conditions suggest, because at this time last year the corporation was in the grip of a strike. For the first two months sales were larger than in 1937, but were sharply lower than for the same periods of 1936 and 1935.

Curb Exchange.

Losses on the Curb Exchange were the widest in several weeks. Suspension of Whitney & Co. had a depressing effect on the early trading. Under-the-rule transactions (closing out of securities because of an insolvency) occupied a large part of the tape, with a long list of bonds appearing under that classification. Distilled Liquors, Inc., in which no trades had taken place since January 19, when it sold at $9 a share, opened at 3½, later recovering a fraction. The stock was believed to be largely controlled by the Whitney interests. Virtually all sales in the stock, around 2,000 shares, were under the rule. Aluminum lost 5 points without much resistance. Babcock & Wilcox, Godchaux Sugar, Cities Service Power, Singer, New Jersey Zinc, Newmont Mining and Pittsburgh Plate Glass fell to 5 points.

Puts and Calls.

The put and call market has not changed much recently. A slight shading in favor of a lower market has taken place in the past week. Steel is still quoted at 5 points away on either side. Chrysler also is now 5 and 5. General Electric is 2 and 2 and General Motors is 1¼ all. Bethlehem is 6 on puts and 5 on calls. New York Central is quoted a half-point down on a put and 1 point up on a call. Anaconda is 1½ either way, and Republic is half-point all. Westinghouse is wide at 6 and 10.

Tax Payments.

The Treasury has a good balance in the Federal Reserve banks and has so arranged the maturity of the $450,000,000 bill issues maturing around March 15 as to enable the whole to be paid off out of income tax receipts. Should there be any question of the adequacy with which payments in will balance payments out, the Treasury may call upon its deposits in the commercial banks. Income tax payments, which take funds out of the market, are estimated at $700,000,000 and there is to be paid out on account of interest on the public debt $160,000,000 which, with the redemption of bills, returns to the market all but about $90,000,0000 of the income tax money.

American Tobacco.

In view of the decline in tobacco prices toward the end of last year, the yearly report of the American Tobacco Co., showing a rise in profits over the previous year, was well received. Investors nevertheless would appreciate a more detailed report. Thanks to the efforts of the SEC, the company for the first time included in its report a statement of sales and cost of sales, although no details are given on that item. In spite of the efforts of the stock exchange to secure more adequate reports a good deal remains to be done, from the investor's point of view, but it is unlikely that mere moral suasion by the stock exchange will do much. So far as American Tobacco is concerned, the balance sheet shows a rise in dollar value of inventories of $16,000,000, but no figures are given on quantities of tobacco involved. The inventory is carried at cost. How valuation at the market at the end of the year would have affected the income account cannot be figured from the statement as published.

Whitney Firm Fails; Stocks Remain Calm

of New York State, questioned Henry D. Mygatt, a partner in the firm and a floor broker, and Robert J. Rosenwald, cashier, for two hours, following which McCall said the hearings would be resumed tomorrow. Attorney General John J. Bennett, in Albany, was keeping in telephonic touch with the investigation.

In Washington, Securities Commissioner John W. Hanes was reported en route to New York today to investigate the failure.

It was also reported the commission had been in touch with the stock exchange previous to today's announcement of the Whitney firm's inability to meet its obligations.

Whitney, a brother of George Whitney, partner in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., was not present at the hearing today. Process servers from McCall's office were unable to locate him. McCall, however, said he believed Whitney would be present for questioning tomorrow.

Neither Mygatt nor Rosenwald would make any comment on their departure from the hearing. McCall was asked if he had found any violation of the Martin act, regulating the sales of securities, and replied it would take probably a week to find that out.

Announces Failure.

Shortly after 10 a. m. today Charles R. Gay—who succeeded Whitney as president of the exchange in 1935, after the so-called "old guard" forces behind Whitney in the exchange were bested in a bitter controversy—mounted the rostrum commanding the mammoth trading floor at Broad and Wall streets.

Sounding the gong to halt trading, Gay announced the firm's suspension. Within a few minutes, the following statement was made public by the exchange:

"In the course of an examination of the affairs of Richard Whitney & Co., the committee on business conduct discovered, on March 1, evidence of conduct apparently contrary to just and equitable principles of trade, and on Monday, March 7, at 1:30 p. m., presented to a special meeting of the governing committee charges and specifications.

"Hearing on the charges was set for March 17.

"This morning, the firm of Richard Whitney & Co. advised the exchange that it was unable to meet its obligations and suspension for insolvency was announced from the rostrum."

File in Bankruptcy.

Two hours later, former United States District Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, on behalf of the firm, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy for the copartnership and for the partners as individuals.

Sumner Ford, member of the brokerage house's counsel, issued the following statement in the partners' behalf:

"When yesterday it seemed evident that this firm would not be able to meet its current liabilities today, accountants were called in to prepare detailed statements and in the meantime it was determined to protect the interests of all creditors by suspending business.

"As to the charges which have been made by a committee of the exchange, we ask those interested to reserve opinion until this firm has made its answer and had an opportunity to be heard in accordance with the constitution of the exchange."

The exchange would not give out the details of the "charges and specifications." One report connected them with activity in the stock of the Distilled Liquors Corporation, of which Whitney is a director. In the latest SEC summary of stockholdings of directors, Whitney was listed as the owner of 12,800 shares of the common stock on January 1.

Bid Yesterday at $1.50.

This stock—listed on the New York Curb Exchange—sold last on January 19 at $9 a share. It was offered this morning at $9.50 and the only bid was $1.50, for a block of 100 shares. Under curb procedure, a compromise price of $3.50 was fixed.

In former days, many Wall Street authorities pointed out, the failure of a firm of such prominence would have caused a speculative wave of selling in the exchange, whether or not it possessed deep-lying implications. Under the new rules of the SEC, short selling in a declining market is a virtual impossibility.

Furthermore, "the street" was quick to sense an apparent lack of broad financial implications in the failure. The Whitney firm was relatively small and did a select commission business for important interests at times, including the house of Morgan. The firm had no broad contacts with the public and, in itself, was not generally regarded as an important financial factor.

Whitney's career was colorful.

A native of Beverly, Mass., a product of Groton and Harvard, Whitney entered the stock exchange in 1912, purchasing a membership and entering the firm of Cummings & Marckwald. The name of this firm was changed to Richard Whitney & Co. in 1916.

The youth quickly rose to a position of power as a representative of the "old guard" forces which controlled the exchange.

Gains Authority.

In 1929, Whitney, as vice president of the exchange, was dramatically injected into a position of authority in the October selling panic.

E. H. H. Simmons, president of the exchange, was in Hawaii when the collapse came and Whitney became presiding officer, struggling to keep the exchange open. When Morgan and other leading bankers amassed a pool of millions to support the market, Whitney executed some of the orders for purchases of stock on the floor of the exchange.

On "Black Thursday," October 24, when security prices were plunging disastrously, Whitney, representing the pool, stood by the U. S. Steel post, bidding $205 for 25,000 shares of "big steel," when it had just been offered at $194. The story subsequently was denied.

The governing sommittee, later, cited Whitney as one "endowed with courage, resourcefulness and sound judgment."

Cotton Lower; May 9.06 Cents

New York, March 8 (AP).—Cotton declined today under increased foreign selling and commission house liquidation. May, which had reacted from 9.10 to 9.01, closed at 9.06, with final prices 3 to 7 points net lower.

The market opened unchanged to 2 points lower, but selling from both foreign and domestic sources increased as the stock market weakened during the first hour on reports of a stock exchange failure. Partial rallies followed, but there was no aggressive demand. Later steadiness was attributed to a large extent to light offerings, a little covering and moderate trade support.

RailRateAction Deflates Hopes Of Wall Street

ICC Ruling Declared Disappointing to Those in Industry.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 8.—The Interstate Commerce Commission's partial grant today of the 15 per cent freight rate boost requested by railroads deflated widely held hopes in Wall Street for more extensive aid.

Two outstanding rail authorities in the financial district—Fairman R. Dick and F. J. Lishman—termed the ruling "disappointing."

However, rail analysts conceded half a loaf was better than none at all.

One rail analyst figured the annual increase might amount to $150,000,000 out of the $437,000,000 increase applied for, based on 1936 traffic.

Most rail operating officials withheld judgment until they had opportunity for further study of the increases.

Undecided on Course.

J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, said tonight that he was "disappointed" in the decision.

"Whether we'll go back to the commission again with another petition for higher freight rates, or just what course we will pursue hasn't been decided."

Added Costs Not Covered.

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, said today the increases allowed would not nearly cover the added costs in wages, materials and taxes the railroads have had to assume.

Exemptions Void Increase.

Kansas City, March 8 (AP).—J. M. Kurn, co-trustee of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, read a newspaper account of freight-rate increase tonight and asked:

"How can this do us any good?"

"Heavy commodities from which the roads receive most of their revenue were exempted from the increase. This practically nullifies the increase."

To React Against Carriers.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 8 (AP).—Charles Blaine, traffic counsel for the American National Livestock Association and the National Wool Growers' Association, said tonight that increased freight rates would react against the railroads.

"The livestock men will simply utilize trucks more and more," he said.

Raise Held Inadequate.

San Francisco, March 8 (AP).—Freight rate increases awarded the Nation's railroads today by the Interstate Commerce Commission brought this statement from Samuel T. Bledsoe, president of the Santa Fe Railroad:

"As I understand the commission's decision, the increases are entirely inadequate to cover increases in wages and cost of materials and supplies and taxes in the last few years."

Daily Oil Output Rises 27,680 Bbls.

Tulsa, March 8 (AP).—Production of crude oil in the United States increased 27,680 barrels daily during the week ended March 5 to an average of $3,353,127 barrels daily, the Oil & Gas Journal reported today.

Oklahoma increased 30,900 barrels daily to 522,475, East Texas increased 500, to 426,500, and the State of Texas, 20,258 to 1,269,743. In Louisiana there was a decrease of 1,492 barrels daily to an average of 256,763; California decreased 18,700, to 727,500, and Kansas declined 4,275, to 166,875.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

One of the fallacious theories which has gained ground is that in match-point duplicate, if the first three hands pass, fourth hand must open on anything remotely resembling a bid. Exactly why this philosophy (though I hate to dignify it by such a term) should have come into favor, I cannot say. Certainly it cannot be justified along logical lines. It is true that third hand, particularly at match-point play, should shade the requirements for opening bids, but that word "shade" must be observed in a very literal sense. When third hand is not vulnerable and the opponents are and when, in addition, third hand holds strength in the major suits, and particularly in the higher major, spades, he enjoys a material advantage which, of course, he should attempt to capitalize. When these conditions are not present, however, opening the bidding on shaded values should be handled with kid gloves. Consider South's punishment in the following hand:

West, dealer.
Match-point duplicate.

	♠ A86 ♡ J10 ◇ 96532 ♣ K74
	♠ J109 ♡ Q8 ◇ AKQ10 ♣ 9852

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ◇
Pass	2 ◇	Pass	Pass
Pass

Apparently South thought he could steal a small score and, indeed, a hasty glance at the North-South hands alone would lead one to think that two diamonds was a good contract. Compared to what the opponents could have made had they opened the hand and reached the obvious heart contract, two diamonds was very "cheap." But it was not cheap considering that South could have passed out the entire hand.

West opened his fourth-best heart. East won with the ace, and returned a heart. The king won, and West now boldly returned the club queen. Dummy's king lost to East's ace, and East collected two more natural club tricks. Then, since declarer was found to have the remaining high club, East led the fourth round and West overruffed dummy with the diamond jack. Dummy discarded a spade but this did not help declarer, inasmuch as he would have had to lose only one spade trick in any event. Thus, East-West collected seven tricks, and a 200-point penalty.

As I said before, this was cheap compared to the laydown game, in fact the five-odd in hearts, that East-West could have made. But, surprisingly enough, many other East-West teams did not open the bidding. South, with nothing material except a four-card diamond suit, should have been well content to put his hand back into the board. The player that should have opened the bidding was East who, with good major suit support and a very fair club suit, with a total honor count of 2½ tricks including plus values, would not have been shading to open with one club.

Bob Burns Says—

I know people often wonder how the producers can get everything in the picture so authentic. I know one producer who wanted to make a hill-billy picture so he went down to Arkansas and stayed with one family back in the mountains for two months.

When he left, he told the old farmer why he had stayed there and he says "I stayed with you because you've got such a perfect hill-billy dialect."

The farmer says, "Well, I oughta have—I gave a radio actor a month's board to learn it to me!"

New Light.

"Daylight illumination" is being provided in the Washington Color Laboratories of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics by the means of filtered artificial light, diffused through a frosted glass skylight—and its potentialities are great, the scientists think.

They point out that grading or classing under daylight is important for many commodities such as cotton, grain, hay, tobacco, papers, furs, fruits and vegetables. Classers generally object to any kind of artificial lighting and have a real problem on cloudy days and in rooms where the lighting is poor.

"Though the daylight in this room is artificial, anyone stepping into the room is under the impression that natural daylight is coming through the frosted glass skylight. This feeling of naturalness comes from the accurate reproduction of the rays that make up natural daylight and the thorough diffusion of these rays," it is pointed out.

This artificial daylight closely matches in color the international standard for average daylight. It comes, however, from a battery of 15 huge tungsten lamps that range in size from 500 watts to 1,500 watts. Arranged above the skylight, the light from each lamp passes through a specially designed filter that converts the illumination to that of natural daylight.

For this advance in the field of science the credit goes to Miss Dorothy Nickerson, color technologist for the bureau. She is recognized internationally as an authority on color identification and is secretary of the Inter-Society Color Council.

Relics.

Recent accessions to the Museum of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park have included several relics found by employes of the Park Service and two donations, one a shell from E. R. Armstrong and a tool for opening old iron furnaces from E. G. Barnum.

The shell was found under water, in Wilderness Run, in May, 1935, 71 years after it was fired during the Battle of the Wilderness, May 5 and 6, 1864. This relic now has been placed at the Wilderness Visitors' Contact Station on the Battlefield, on Virginia Route 20.

The furnace tool has been placed in the Chancellorsville Visitors' Contact Station, Virginia, Highway 3, not far from the old Catherine Furnace, where the tool was used.
